Communists Intimidate U.S. Workers, Dies Is Told

Committee Agent Charges They Rule Soft-Coal Division Of Interior Dept.

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Mary Spargo, a former Washington newspaper reporter, now an investigator for the Dies Committee, testified yesterday that she had been shocked to find so many workers in the Federal Government who were "afraid to talk against the Communist Party."

She specifically mentioned the "terrified" employes of the Bituminous Coal Division of the Interior Department in telling how circulars for a "peace" rally mysteriously appeared on the desks there March 18.

An administrative official of this agency, Miss Spargo said, told her that the division was "loaded from top to bottom with Communists."

This man told her, she said, that he had thought of going to see Representative Joe Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama, chairman of the Dies subcommittee that is conducting the current hearing. Then she quoted him as saying:

"But the Communist influence is so heavy and comes from the very top, and I feared it would be unwise for me to see Mr. Starnes."

Be Specific, Voorhis Advises

Representative Jerry Voorhis (Democrat), of California, said that he had every desire to get rid of Communist influences in the Government, but he pointed out that such charges ought to be "pinned down." Otherwise, he said, the charges might lead to a lack of confidence in the Government in the most critical period of American history.

Miss Spargo said that she would give the committee names of individuals and names of Government divisions, but she asked that she be allowed to do it behind closed doors.

"I was very much shocked," she said, "and I didn't believe that there were so many people in the Government who were afraid to talk against the Communist Party.

"I talked to investigators in various Government departments, and they told me, 'We know that employes who have testified against the Communist Party have lost their jobs.'"

Feared Violence, She Says

When Representative Voorhis talked about "pinning down" the charges of Communist influence, Miss Spargo mentioned the Bituminous Coal Division and the Civil Service Commission. She did not go into details about the commission, except to include its employes among those who were "terrified" at the power of the Communists.

Employes of the Bituminous Coal Division, she said, not only were afraid of losing their jobs, but "some have told me they feared physical violence from the Communists."

Miss Spargo, a graduate of the University of Vermont and a former reporter on the Washington Daily News, was one of two women investigators who gave testimony during the day designed to show that the American Peace Mobilization, which is now picketing the White House, was controlled by the Communists. The other witness was Miss Hazel Huffman, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Between them they told of attending a peace rally in New York last April sponsored by the American Peace Mobilization. Miss Spargo said that a Communist named Ted Ozmun asked her to join the Communist Party, saying that only members of the party could hold key posts in the APM. Miss Huff-

Rules Keep 5-Cent Milk From Babies of Poor

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Looking into the District milk situation is like looking into one of those crazy mirrors in an amusement park "nut house."

What goes into the mirror seems all right but what comes back at you . . . !

Consider what goes in:

This Government is in the throes of a defense effort. An important part of that effort is to keep the population healthy. Which means, among other things, keeping it adequately fed.

The most complete single food is milk. Fortunately, there is plenty of it, here and elsewhere in the United States. More than enough, so that the Department of Agriculture encourages increased consumption by subsidizing dairy farmers for their surpluses and routing it to needy families and school children.

There is a need—it is held vital to national defense to satisfy that need—and the machinery exists to do the job.

That's what goes into the mirror, here in Washington.

Needy Are Denied 'Medicine' They Need

But what comes out is this:

A pathetically small amount of surplus milk is being consumed in Washington.

Nutritionists and physicians are upset over a situation in which needy women and children are freely provided with medical care but are denied milk—the "medicine" they need most of all—at a purse-fitting price.

There is a grave possibility that many Washington school children will have to be stricken off the free-milk rolls in September because of the relatively high price the District has to pay for it.

It makes no more sense than the reflection from that trick mirror. The only difference is that the one result is not expected and the other is.

Here is something else. Faced with the problem presented by hundreds of indigent and semi-indigent clients who have little or no milk in their homes, the Health Security Administration yesterday volunteered to buy surplus milk for them at 5 cents a quart if they were certified as eligible.

These people have been investigated and found deserving of free or part-pay medical and hospital care in the Capital's private hositals. In many instances, undernourishment is a factor in their illnesses or injuries.

Would Protect Health of Babies

An ordinary supply of milk daily might keep their babies out of hospitals. It would indisputably promote the health of expectant mothers and their unborn offspring.

Having the misfortune to be neither on direct relief nor certified for WPA, these people are disqualified for 5-cent surplus milk. Many could hardly afford to pay even that nickel a quart. But the Health Security Administration is willing to pay that, out of a private milk fund which it administers.

It is the Surplus Marketing Administration, Department of Agriculture, that says who shall and who shall not be eligible for the nickel bottles. That thousands of needy are now barred is not its fault, however.

The spread would be far greater but for opposition by the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association to plans to include WPA workers and beneficiaries of private charity as surplus milk eligibles. This was attempted when the program was launched here last summer.

A net gain in consumption would have resulted. It was not a matter of taking people off 11 to 15-cent milk and accommodating them at 5 cents a quart. They—and their children—simply were not drinking it, or drinking it in negligibly small quantities.

Restrictive Rules Could Be Relaxed

It is not too late to change all this. For one thing, a Health Department official said yesterday that milk is plentiful. At least 50 more producers are expected to be licensed before the end of 1941. That's twice the average. Surplus milk should be with us for some time to come.

And as for those restrictive rules, they can be liberalized, too. So long as those 5-cent quarts are placed in the hands of the poor, of those to whom it's a case of nickel nourishment or nothing, the law is being complied with and everything is okay.

A charitable attitude on the part of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association would not exactly retard the relaxation of the rules.

Penny-per-half-pint milk for needy school children, an altogether different matter, may be imperative if the District is to continue its free school lunch program.

Welfare Director Robert E. Bondy expresses the fear that the project, conducted jointly with WPA, may have to be curtailed—if not discontinued—because of rising prices which the District must pay for the commodity.

Last September, at the beginning of the school year, the price was 2 1-3 cents a half-pint bottle, or at the rate of a little

Young to Tell Need of Funds For Schools, Water and Police

Washington's need for funds to provide schools, a safe water supply, sewer extensions and a bigger police force for thousands of national defense workers will be outlined for a House District Appropriations Subcommittee today by District Commissioner John Russell Young.

Young, Brig. Gen. Charles Kutz, the District's Engineer Commissioner, and other city officials will appear before the subcommittee at 10 a. m. at the start of executive hearings on the District's 1942 appropriation bill.

Young said last night that his statement will depart from the general outline of District needs usually made by heads of the city government to stress fiscal problems posed by the national defense program since department estimates were prepared last September.

Meanwhile, the subcommittee, headed by Representative George Mahon (Democrat), of Texas, awaited a Budget Bureau report on District estimates of approxi-

Knox Urges Neutrality Act's Repeal

More Eyes for Fleet

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Secretary of Navy Knox yesterday called for repeal of the Neutrality Act and reestablishment of the policy of "freedom of the seas" for American merchant ships.

Such action would permit United States vessels to enter war zones and discharge war materials at British and other combat ports.

At the same time, the Secretary disclosed that he will ask Congress to more than double the appropriations for naval aviation for the fiscal year beginning July 1 by voting an additional $510,861,100 for 2,236 more long-range bombers and other warplanes.

Calls It a "Terrible Blunder"

Making public a report on the progress of the naval aircraft expansion program which showed 3,476 planes now in service, Knox attacked the neutrality act as a "terrible blunder."

"I am a firm believer, like the President, in the freedom of the seas," he declared at a press conference. "I violently opposed enactment of the Neutrality Act and have been yelling for its repeal. Speaking as a newspaperman, I consider the act a terrible blunder."

The statement, expected to lend fuel to the intense Congressional debate on ways to get war materials to England, was accompanied by a declaration that convoys may not be the answer to the question.

"It's silly to talk of a method that was satisfactory 24 years ago when we don't know it will meet the problem today," Knox said. "At that time there was only one menace to shipping, submarines. Today it is menaced from under the sea, from the surface and from the air."

Force of 9,365 Planes Planned

The report on naval aviation revealed that the new funds request will be in addition to the $434,500,000 already voted for support of the naval air arm during the next year. With the funds the number of planes ordered for the Navy will be increased from 7,129 to 9,365. Twenty-seven "blimps" also will

Glider Troops, 7,000 'Chutists Fail to Win Key Points in Crete; 7 Warships Bombed, Nazis Say

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, May 21.—German bomber pilots claimed to have dealt a heavy blow to the British fleet in the eastern Mediterranean today, hitting one battleship, five cruisers and a destroyer, and leaving four of them aflame.

In addition, one of the cruisers was last seen to be listing badly, said the official German news agency D. N. B., which reported the engagement tonight.

Exact location of the attack was not disclosed (but apparently was in the neighborhood of Crete, where the British fleet is reported to have repulsed attempted troop landings by sea).

Direct Hits Claimed

The D. N. B. report came hard on the heels of a German spokesman's declaration that Nazi parachutists had occupied several strategic points in Crete after concentrated dive-bomber attacks softened British resistance.

D. N. B. said the bombers made a clean hit on the British battleship with a bomb of medium caliber, and that a heavier one exploded near the stern with such force that the big ship was thrust sidewise.

"It may be assumed that the ship's ability to maneuver suffered seriously," said D. N. B.

One cruiser began to list and burn as soon as it was hit amidships, and a bomb struck near another cruiser's side, D. N. B. continued.

Nazis Cite War Rules

Three other cruisers and the destroyer were hit cleanly, while other bombs exploded so near to a second battleship and yet another cruiser that damage to them was said to be regarded as certain.

A warning of the sternest retaliation if any German parachutists are handled brutally or illigally followed the statement yesterday of Prime Minister Churchill that 1,500 of the Germans wore New Zealand uniforms.

"This infamous statement undoubtedly was in preparation for combatting the Germans by means forbidden by international law," an authorized spokesman declared.

"The attack on Crete was preceded by intensive dive-bombing and therefore the element of surprise was lacking and there was no purpose in Germans appearing in New Zealand uniforms. I can tell you informally that the reprisals will be 10 to 1 if the international rules of warfare are violated."

Nazis May Hold 24 American Ambulance Drivers on Zamzam

Twenty-four American ambulance drivers rescued from the Egyptian steamer Zamzam may be detained by German authorities on the grounds that they could "squeal" Nazi military secrets, the State Department learned yesterday, shortly after hearing that 140 Americans from the sunken Alexandria-bound steamer are safe in St. Jean de Luz, famous resort on the French Atlantic Coast.

A bout with tangled questions of international law still confronts the volunteer drivers before they can gain freedom, it appeared from Berlin dispatches. Among the group who were on their way to Africa to join Free French forces is Donald R. King, of Chevy Chase, Md., a former Georgetown University student.

German naval authorities stated unequivocally that they had no objection to the Americans leaving by way of Spain and Portugal.

But later, authorized sources in Berlin said Germany first would make sure that the ambulance drivers who were aboard the ill-fated ship, once feared lost with all 322 passengers, would be in no position to reveal military secrets.

Henry S. Waterman, United States consul at Bordeaux, left immediately for the little seaside town near the Spanish border.

The State Department anxiously awaited Waterman's report. The group of rescued Americans, whom the Germans said were landed in St. Jean de Luz by a merchant vessel, included 62 men, 53 women and 25 children.

Donald Heath, secretary of the United States Embassy in Berlin, was told the German attitude toward the ambulance drivers by the department of American affairs in the German foreign office.

He was informed that the Zamzam, allegedly carrying contraband for British and Free French forces, was sunk. The Zamzam's cargo included 20 ambulances for Free

British Claim New Successes In Middle East

R. A. F. Blasting Foes In Iraq, Syria, Libya, Says Communique

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, May 21.—Air and land successes against the German, Italian and Iraq enemies were reported by the British Middle East command today on the far-flung battlefronts of Iraq, Syria, North Africa and Ethiopia.

In Iraq, where the action continues to be largely aerial, the British gave this picture of the situation:

British positions were consolidated around Fallujah, Euphrates river town just west of Bagdad, which air-borne British troops have seized.

Blast Iraqi Airdrome

The R. A. F. inflicted "considerable damage" on hangars and other buildings of the Iraqis' Raschid airdrome near Bagdad.

Two junkers troop-carrying planes were hit in continuing R. A. F. raids on Damascus and Palmyra airports in French-mandated Syria, which the Germans are continuing to use to ferry men and planes into Iraq.

Basra Reports in Conflict

(The British said the situation around the Persian Gulf port of Basra was quiet, but an Iraq communique declared the British had been driven back with heavy losses.)

The R. A. F. reported destruction of a Junkers troop-carrier and a Messerschmitt fighter at Mekili and the machine-gunning of German-Italian trucks in the Gazala and Tobruk areas, all in Libya.

On the ground, a British garrison still hung on in besieged Tobruk while British mechanized patrols continued to harass the Axis troops around Salum, Egypt.

The British announced the formal surrender of the Duke of Aosta at Amba Alaji and the total number of captives taken in that area as between 18,000 and 19,000.

Nazis in Paris Order Foreign Diplomats Out

Deadline Is June 10; U. S. Told Area Is Now In Zone of Operations

By the Associated Press

Vichy, May 21.—The possibility of the restoration of Paris as the French government's capital apparently was ended today by a German order for all foreign embassies and legations in Paris to withdraw their representatives by June 10.

After the fall of France last June, the French negotiated for the Vichy government to return to the German-occupied city and set up offices there. Negotiations have been continuing but diplomats here believed today's order ended the possibility of any return by the French government to Paris.

The United States and other members of the foreign diplomatic corps here received word from their embassies and legations in Berlin that they would have to get their representatives out of Paris by June 10.

It was said the order came from the Wilhelmstrasse.

Representatives of foreign governments now in Paris have been occupied mainly with taking care of their citizens there and their interests in the occupied zone.

Only Germany and Italy keep regular embassies in Paris. All diplomatic relations with the French government are handled at Vichy.

(In Washington, the State Department said the German government had requested the United States to remove its diplomatic representation from Paris because the Reich regards the Paris area as an extended zone of operations.)

The American representatives now in Paris, Edwin A. Plitt, Tyler Thompson and Lawrence W. Taylor, hold dual commissions from the State Department for both consular and diplomatic functions. It was not known in Vichy whether the order affects consular authorities.

Fantastic Warfare

By the Associated Press

London (Thursday), May 22. Thousands of German sky troops plummeting down on the Island of Crete by parachute and glider plane were reported early today to have failed to gain any key points in their audacious battle with British and Greek defenders.

Nazi shock troops also tried to storm the island's rocky shores with speedboats but were repulsed, British sources said.

Cairo said 1,000 Nazis were killed or captured in the first day's fighting Tuesday.

Many of the German gliders were reported to have crashed in landing. It was one of the most fantastic battles in history, marking the first use of glider-borne troops.

Informed sources in London said there was every indication the attack, in its third day, was increasingly violent, with the possibility that 7,000 parachutists were now in the battle.

Fail to Gain Toehold

Intensified efforts of sea-borne forces to gain a toehold on the embattled island have failed thus far, the informed sources said.

There was no confirmation here of the official German news agency D. N. B.'s report that the Luftwaffe had bombed five cruisers, a battleship and a destroyer in the eastern Mediterranean, firing four ships and causing the cruiser to list.

Referring to the D. N. B. claim, one authorized source said "the report is simply another German fishing expedition seeking to learn the locations of British ships.

Hero of Gallipoli and Somme, Maj. Gen. Bernard C. Freyberg, the British commander, rallied land, sea and air forces to a fight which he knew might be long and severe.

Situation Well in Hand

The latest word received from Greek sources at the British Middle East headquarters of Cairo, was, in general terms, that the British had the military situation in Crete in hand, that many of the invaders had been destroyed on landing and that Allied forces were well able to deal with those invading units still fighting for a toe-hold.

Authoritative sources said besides the 7,000 parachutists reportedly ordered into the operation more thousands might be expected to come from the Greek mainland, about 100 miles away. They could not, or would not, say precisely

Mountain Boy Coolly Recites His Story of Triple Slaying

Lad Acknowledges He Didn't Give His Victims a Chance

By Jack Morris

Front Royal, Va., May 21.—A fair-haired mountain boy of 15, who looks more like the teacher's pet than the cold-blooded killer that he is, coolly acknowledged today that he shot a middle-aged couple that he shot a middle-aged couple to death last night without giving them a chance.

"I needed $17. I wanted to get my bicycle back," he explained.

The boy, Thomas Dewey (Buck) Cameron, whose home is a two-room frame cabin on the side of a hill, deep in these Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia, looked straight into the eyes of a Post reporter and answered every question without hesitation, "Yes, sir," or "No, sir."

From his replies came confirmation of the story that today was the subject of hushed conversation wherever country folk gathered, from the picturesque Shenandoah National Park, on whose fringe the tragedy occurred, to the stylish hunt country of Virginia, hardly 25 miles away.

This is the story:

Buck Cameron was accused recently by his grandfather, Herbert Williams, keeper of a country store half a mile from the Cameron cabin, 16 miles from here, of stealing $17 from him.

Nazi 'Squeeze Play'

Germans Force Turks to Permit Railroad to Haul War Supplies

By the Associated Press

Vichy, May 21.—German military equipment already is crossing Turkey en route to Iraq by rail, due to a Nazi squeeze play, diplomatic sources here reported tonight.

Reports from Istanbul said passenger traffic to Syria and Iraq had been stopped, but did not mention freight traffic.

Diplomatic circles here said the situation was this:

Small German military units in Iraq quickly established themselves along the railroad to Turkey and threatened to cut this line north of Bagdad unless the Turks agreed to let German material move through Turkey to Iraq.

Since this route to the Persian Gulf is a principal source of imports for Turkey now that the east Mediterranean is a war zone, the Turks had to comply.

The Turkish Embassy here flatly denied some reports that Turkey had demanded territorial concessions from the French, and French circles said they had no confirmation that De Gaullist forces had penetrated Syrian territory from British bases.

7,000 Hurled Upon Crete From the Sky

how many actually had been landed.

[Unofficial but reliable reports indicated that probably 15,000 Nazi invaders already had reached Crete in aerial troop transports, a United Press dispatch said. Another 40,000 Germans were reported to be poised in Greece ready to take off.]

The situation on the 160-mile-long island itself, so far as could be told, was this:

At least 4,500 troops have been landed from the skies on the western end of Crete, about Suda Bay, the British naval base, and the island capital of Canea, 5 miles distant.

Three thousand of these came down on the shores of the bay beginning at 4:30 p. m. Tuesday. Within two hours, Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons today, "the greater part of these had been accounted for." The fighting there went on today, but the situation was considered in hand as early as 9 p. m. last night, he said.

Another great air fleet attacked, meantime, in the Candia (Heraclion) sector, vicinity of the island's best air base, some 65 miles east of Canea and more than midway of the island, and at Retima, 30 miles east of Canea.

Here, Stukas and Messerschmitts assaulted the defenders first, and at 5:30 p. m., Tuesday, parachutists and gliders swarmed down.

Many of the latter crashed upon landing.

The details of this atack on the midsiland sector were not divulged, and Churchill told the House of Commons they were not yet known.

Expects Severe Attack

Certainly, he warned the House, we must expect that the fighting will continue in increasing severity."

The Middle East command in Cairo added certain details of the fighting, including the news that a detachment of parachutists which penetrated the outskirts of Canea, the capital, had been quickly rounded up, that all day Tuesday there had been severe air attacks and successive waves of both parachute and plane or glider-borne troops.

The prime minister took careful account of the overwhelming interest in the Battle of Crete by making his third statement to Commons and the country in two days on the progress of the battle. He took a lesson, too, from the general dissatisfaction which had been provoked by lack of information about the Battle of Greece itself.

In response to a question, he reaffirmed his statement of yesterday that 1,500 of the German troops who first landed in Crete wore New Zealand battle dress and he added, today, that others were dressed in the field uniforms of British tommies.

Whether these invaders, so masked, are to be shot at once as spies when they are captured he left to the discretion of Gen. Freyberg.

While the fighting on Crete raged on, the R. A. F., using heavy bombers, flew by night to the attack on Greek mainland bases for the air-borne invasion. Detailed results were, for the time being, withheld.

Now the city is paying $.0315, or almost 13 cents a quart. Next week bids are scheduled to be opened for furnishing the milk during July, August and September. If prices are appreciably higher, curtailment of the program is almost a certainty.

Despite the summer vacation, school lunches will be continued during those months, at about half the present volume.

The Capital's chances of obtaining it will be described tomorrow.

No Choice but Aid Foes of Axis, U. S. Ambassador Says

Havana, May 21 (INS).—United States Ambassador Georges S. Messersmith said tonight that America has "no choice but to aid in the destruction of the totalitarian states."

Addressing the American Chamber of Commerce at Havana, Messersmith, formerly attached to the United States Embassy in Berlin, declared:

"With the people of our countries and those of all the Americas united, there is no question in my mind as to the outcome of this war."

Chicago, May 21 (INS).—Lynn R. Edminister, special economic assistant to Secretary of State Hull, declared today the United States must be prepared to "meet force with force," if necessary, to combat the threat of the totalitarian powers to American interests.

assignment and the Germans expect scant resistance.

"It is expected," the commentary observed, "that the most important military positions have been built into fortresses, and that air bases have been increased. The use of the British air force from Egypt and from airplane carriers also is counted on. Besides, the English fleet can participate in land operations from the sea."

Nazis May Intern 24 Americans

French units in Africa, and Nazi authorities allege that the ship also carried trucks and other equipment.

The women and children, Heath was informed, are free to leave as soon as arrangements can be made. According to Berlin, all the Americans are in good health at an internment camp.

The argument for detaining the ambulance drivers was that the rule heretofore observed was that such individuals, when captured in battle, are treated as prisoners of war.

The argument for releasing them was that the sinking of the Zamzam in the South Atlantic by a raider could not be called a battle in which the drivers performed any military function.

A German spokesman was said in dispatches to have argued that any American who enters the war zone is obligated to act as an "official observer."

"Therefore," the spokesman was quoted as saying, "it devolves upon him to act as part of the neutrality patrol on behalf of England proclaimed by President Roosevelt.

"And he becomes obliged to 'squeal' whatever he knows of war news to Angla-American authorities as soon as possible."

Accordingly, it was indicated in Berlin that American authorities who may be permitted to talk with the rescued party will have to do so under controlled conditions, in the presence of German observers.

German authorities in St. Jean de Luz were already questioning the Americans to learn how much military information they learned, it was said.

It was indicated that the non-Americans as well as the Zamzam's crew were also safe in St. Jean de Luz.

Falange Party Officer Hints at Purge Possibility

Madrid, May 21 (AP).—Jose Luis Arreses, taking office as secretary-general of the Falange Party with the rank of cabinet minister, condemned "false" friends of the Falangists and enigmatically declared:

"It does not grieve us to talk of purges."

In the wake of recent government and military shakeups, the new party official told a group of high ranking Falange followers that "we must send back to their hovels all these last-minute patriots and impertinent rumor mongers. We must break with the false friendship of those who call themselves our friends while they lament our faults compassionately."

be acquired with the proposed funds.

Officials said that the additional 2,236 craft will be "practically all" combat airplanes and that "a large proportion" of them will be the big four-engine patrol boats, which have a range of 4,000 miles or more with a "pay load" of bombs.

The additional craft will carry the Navy well over its 10,000-plane program voted by Congress last year, furnishing a good start on the 15,000-plane objective. Capt. Marc A. Mitscher, assistant chief of the bureau of naval aeronautics, said the Navy expected to reach the latter goal by July, 1943.

600 Combat Craft Delivered

Knox disclosed that 36 of the large patrol planes were turned out by the Consolidated Aircraft Co. during April and that this rate is being maintained. Since July 1—during which period the number of naval planes of all types expanded from 2,172 to 3,476—600 combat craft have been delivered, it was said.

Six aircraft carriers with an average complement of 84 planes are now in service, together with about 200 patrol planes, Knox said. Deliveries of all types of naval planes totaled 996 during the first four months of 1941, it was reported, compared with but 464 during the last four months of 1940.

Pilot training is now lagging behind plane deliveries, Knox reported, even though the entry rate of student fliers has increased from 100 to 500 in the past year. The output is now about 200 pilots a month. Beginning in July, 800 embryo fliers will begin flight training monthly, which should produce about 600 qualified pilots a month. The personnel lag is expected to be caught up by January.

Knox also disclosed that Admiral Thomas C. Hart will be retained indefinitely as commander in chief of the Asiatic Fleet despite the fact he reaches the legal retirement age of 64 next month. He described him as "an exceptionally good man in a situation which requires a great deal of experience."

He also announced that Naval ROTC courses will be established at eight colleges, including Notre Dame, Duke University, Rice Institute, University of Colorado, College of the Holy Cross, University of New Mexico, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute and Tufts College.

Fascists Open New Press Attack On Vatican Paper

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Rome, May 21.—A new attack upon L'Osservatore Romano, the Vatican newspaper, was made here today by Roberto Farinacci, high ranking Fascist, expressing indirectly the dissatisfaction of Fascists generally with the Holy See in the last few days since Pope Pius XII avoided diplomatically a recognition of Croatia or of Ante Pavelic as the new chief of the Croatian state.

"L'Osservatore Romano with methodical and vigilant severity, reduces to a few lines the news of events which concern Italy, plays down many of the most important happenings in Germany and gives much space to life in enemy countries," Farinacci wrote in his newspaper, Il Regime Fascista. "Yet it still believes itself and wishes to be believed impartial."

"As a matter of fact, Mr. Roosevelt and the United States always find a vast echo in the newspaper of the Holy See. It loses no opportunity to exalt the Christianity of the United States."

Committee Hears Women Agents

Miss Spargo, a former Washington reporter working under the name of Mary Spargo, and Miss Huffman, an investigator for the Dies Committee, yesterday told committee members that Communists had organized many peace mobilization movements in the United States

Col. Olds, Crew Of Seven Unhurt In Bomber Mishap

Col. Robert S. Olds, veteran bomber pilot, and a crew of seven escaped without injury late yesterday when the retractable landing gear of an Army Douglas bomber failed on the take-off at Bolling Field.

With Col. Olds at the controls, the big ship had just started down the runway when the landing gear collapsed, dropping the plane on its belly. Maj. Kenneth N. Walker, copilot, was in the pilot compartment with Col. Olds, the remainder of the crew in the after part of the ship.

Col. Olds and his party climbed into another ship of the same type and continued their flight to Langley Field, Va.

man told of seeing many prominent Communists at the rally.

Sang Communist Songs

When Miss Huffman said that the American Peace Mobilization people sang the same songs as the Communist Party, and then went on to read some of them from a song book, the spectators at the hearing burst into laughter.

One song went as follows:

"Wendell Willkie and F. D.
Both agree on killing me."

There was another one against conscription, whic hended with profanity, and also one about "Eleanor and Franklin" and their desire to see everybody dead. Two other favorites, Miss Huffman said, were the "Internationale" and "Solidarity Forever."

Miss Spargo said she had joined the American Peace Mobilization here "in a sort of fashion." She said of the 500 people who went to New York from here to attend the April peace rally, about 150 were Government workers. She said she "believed" the most of the Government workers she saw were members of the Unite Federal Workers, C. I. O.

Among those who went along, she said, were Samuel Schmerler, whom she identified as an employe of the Federal Securities Administration, and Hugh B. Miller, of the Bituminous Coal Division. She said that in New York Schmerler had put in a plug for the Washington Bookshop.

Miss Spargo testified in the afternoon about her investigation at the Bituminous Coal Division She said that on March 18 a throwaway, or printed circular, had appeared on every desk of the eleventh and twelfth floors of the building occupied by the commission

Feared for Job

The circular was headed, "America Wants Democracy and Peace," and advertised a rally that was being staged at Turner's Arena under the auspices of the National Negro Congress, the National Youth Congress, the Washington Peace Mobiliation, the Washington Youth Council and the Industrial Workers Order The speakers at the rally were advertised as Anna Louise Strong, Eugene P. Connolly, George U. Murphy and Sarah V. Montgomery, the latter secretary--treasurer of the Washington Peace Mobilization.

"I went to an Administration official," Miss Spargo said. "When I presented my credentials from the Dies Committee, he said he was glad to see me; that the place was loaded from top to bottom with Communists."

Then she quoted the official as saying he was afraid of losing his job if he did anything about the situation.

She said she had been told that the peace circulars had been in the desk of Harry I. Rand, of the legal division, the night before they were distributed.

To Produce Witness

A girl employe to whom she talked, Miss Spargo said, told her that the circulars had been in Mr. Rand's desk. But when she told the girl that the Dies Committee was trying to get at the bottom of the matter, Miss Spargo said the girl suddenly changed, saying:

"But I know nothing about it. I know nothing about Mr. Rand, and there is nothing I can tell the committee."

Miss Spargo said she would produce a witness at an executive session who would tell how all the employes in the coal division were terrified at the idea of testifying against the Communist Party.

The opening of yesterday's hearing was enlivened when Capitol police escorted Allan Taub, a New York attorney, from the room. Taub was trying to make an explanation when he was interrupted. Later in the day Chairman Starnes said that there had been a misunderstanding, and that he had learned that Taub's clients—Arthur B. Hersey and Muriel Koenigsberg, of the Washington Committee for Aid to China—had brought their records in response to the committee's subpena.

Hearing This Morning

The hearing is scheduled to be continued at 10 o'clock this morning in the caucus room of the old House Office Building.

Mrs. Sarah V. Montgomery, secretary-treasurer of the Washington Peace Mobilization, said in a statement last night that the Dies Committee attack was "another desperate Administration attempt to silence the people's opposition to convoy and another A. E. F."

She branded as a deliberate and malicious slander "the statement by the paid spy of the Dies Committee that the American Peace Mobilization advocates general strikes to obstruct national defense."

Ford to Assemble Heavy Bombers

The OPM is negotiating a contract with the Ford Motor Co. to manufacture and assemble heavy bombers at a new plant the company is building at Ypsilanti, Mich., OPM Director General William S. Knudsen disclosed yesterday.

The Ford production plus increased output under expansion contracts soon to be signed with three Western aircraft companies, "will bring us near to what the President wants" as the goal for the four-engined bombers, the defense chief told a press conference. He also confirmed reports that that goal is 500 heavy bombers a month.

(Present production of the heavy craft, according to private estimates, is about 100 planes a month, from the parent plants of Consolidated and Douglas Aircraft companies. Also scheduled to be in operation by early 1942, is production of an additional 100 planes a month at the Government-owned assembly plants at Tulsa, Okla., and Fort Worth, Tex. The President's expansion program, the general terms of which were intimated in a letter to Secretary of War Stimson two weeks ago, apparently calls for increased production by about 300 planes per month.)

$650,000,000 for Plants

At a press conference later in the day, Federal Loan Administrator Jesse H. Jones disclosed that $650,000,000 was allocated yesterday for the expanded bomber program, to be used in the construction of Government-owned airplane, aluminum and magnesium plants.

The amounts, he explained, were requested by the OPM. They include $350,000,000 for plane factories, $250,000,000 for aluminum plants and $50,000,000 for magnesium plants. All will be operated by private companies on a management basis. Locations of the plants and other details will be determined by the OPM, he said.

Western Plants to Expand

Knudsen said the Western plants which will expand capacity under the new program are the Boeing factory at Seattle, the Lockheed plant at Burbank, Calif., and the Douglas unit at Santa Monica, Calif. He added that Ford has lready contrcted to manufacture parts for assembly in the Government plants in the Southwest, and that this work would not be curtailed by the company's new venture into complete bomber production.

The current program calling far 200 twin-engined bombers to be assembled at two other Government plants, in Omaha and Kansas City, is also to be pushed ahead, Knudsen said, but at the present time there are no plans for increasing the output.

To Spread Orders

Turning to the OPM's program for spreading defense orders, Knudsen confirmed the impression that subcontracting requirements would be written into future armament orders. Each contract, he explained, would contain a "statement of policy" to which the contractor would subscribe, setting forth the desired percentage of the work which the prime contractor should farm out. This percentage will vary from industry to industry.

The defense chief also admitted the truth of reports that the goal of aluminum production for the expanded defense and bomber programs has been set at 1,600,000,000 pounds a year, with the final 600,000,000 pounds to be made in Government owned plants operated on a management basis by the Aluminum Company of America, the Reynolds Metal Co., and the Bohn Aluminum Co.

Asked about steel expansion, Knudsen said "it would be his preference" to have existing companies add to their facilities rather than to build new plants from the ground up. His remarks were seen as indicating definite OPM disapproval of the recent $150,000,000 project of Henry J. Kaiser, West Coast builder, to construct new iron and steel plants in Utah and Pacific Coast States.

Moscow to Drill 7,000 Citizens Against 'Chutists

By the Associated Press

Moscow, May 21.—This capital called 7,000 citizens today to practice the repulse of parachute troops in special drills Saturday and Sunday, while the organ of the Young Communist League declared:

"The present international situation compels us to prepare seriously day by day for war."

The Stalinist policy is one of armed preparedness, the paper, Consomol Pravda, continued in a four-column article and, although Russia remains neutral, it criticized any spirit of pacifism. The paper said:

"We cannot and must not be weaker militarily than our rivals. The Red army must be the strongest in the world."

Simultaneously, the army newspaper, Red Star, announced the summoning of reserve troops and junior commanders for their annual field training, and said that youths of the Lwow Province, in the western Ukraine (part of partitioned Poland), were awaiting a call to military service.

Argentina Closes German Bookstore

Buenos Aires, May 21 (AP).—Police closed a German bookstore on a busy downtown street today after a disturbance followed upon its display of a picture of the Argentine hero, Gen. Jose de San Martin, flanked by pictures of Hitler and Mussolini.

Angry passersby smashed the window yesterday and police ordered the proprietor to withdraw either the picture of the general or those of the Axis leaders. When he refused, the place was taken over by police.

Vinson Asks Funds to Bolster Navy Secret Service Today

By International News Service

Increased danger of sabotage and other subversive activities in the Nation's vital naval bases yesterday prompted the Administration to urge quick action by Congress to strengthen the Navy's secret service force.

Chairman Carl Vinson (Democrat), of the Naval Affairs Committee announced he would seek House approval of the measure today as the House passed nine other bills yesterday designed to improve defense plants including new facilities to train air pilots and Merchant Marine seamen.

Three hundred and fifty additional secret agents under a new civilian director are to be added to the "plant protection force" in naval yards and other shore stations, under the Vinson bill.

Reports of Saboteurs.

Representative Bradley (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, in reporting the measure, declared present Marine Corps units and secret agents "are considered inadequate and unsuited for the duties contemplated for a plant protection force."

"What is needed is a force of trained men to prevent saboteurs and subversive individuals from injuring Government property or Government interests," Bradley said.

There are 195,000 civilian employes and 34,000 WPA workers in naval shore stations. Chairman Vinson said there were reports that some saboteurs and other persons suspected of subversive activities obtained employment during the drive to speed warship construction.

Measures Sped

Acting with speed, meanwhile, the House passed these defense measures:

1. To allow Reserve and National Guard officers to take air pilot training without relinquishing their present ranks by creating the grade of aviation cadets.
2. To permit enlisted men to take training for air service.
3. To increase pay of parachute jumpers—officers to receive $100 per month extra and enlisted men, $50 per month. (This bill now goes to the White House.)
4. To authorize the Maritime Commission to turn over to State nautical schools vessels for training of merchant seamen and to increase Federal allowances for upkeep.
5. To prohibit use or possession of narcotics, including marijuana, aboard American vessels on the high seas, as well as within territorial limits.
6. To permit the Treasury to negotiate contracts for construction of new Coast Guard vessels with recently constructed and enlarged shipyards that cannot meet present Government requirements.
7. To remove preference given Pacific Coast bidders on materials being purchased by the War Department's Quartermaster Corps.
8. To authorize the War Department to pay donors to blood banks being built up for use in case the Nation goes to war.
9. To permit the Secretary of War to detail officers and enlisted men to educational institutions and industrial plants for training in specialist Army sections.

Young to Tell Need for Funds

mately $1,200,000 to be added to original budget estimates of $51,765,000 sent to Congress by President Roosevelt in January.

$750,000 for Schools

The supplemental estimates on which the bureau is expected to complete its study today or tomorrow, chiefly cover probable increases in operating expenses and $750,000 for additional schools.

Young's statement, however, will outline need for a large number of capital improvements such as structures to safeguard the city's water supply and a new Northwest health center.

In addition to stating fiscal requirements of a swiftly expanding city, Young said he would call the committee's attention to a number of old municipal buildings, chiefly schools, which have fallen into such a dilapidated state because of lack of repair funds that they must now be replaced by new structures.

Congress learned yesterday that the District needs $122,462 to cover unanticipated obligations incurred during the fiscal years 1940 and 1941. President Roosevelt transmitted to Speaker Rayburn 1940 deficiency estimates of $46,422 and 1941 supplemental estimates of $76,040.

Funds Asked for Prisoners

The items ranged from a request for $64.19 for payment of coroner's jurors and witnesses for which there were no funds in 1940 to an estimate of $34,947 to meet the city's obligations to the Federal Government for support of District prisoners in United States penitentiaries and institutions.

A total of $30,942 was asked for payment of court judgments against the city and $25,000 was requested for "refund of erroneous collections."

LaGuardia Sees No Need For 'Alarm'

By the Associated Press

New York, May 21.—Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, who yesterday was appointed by President Roosevelt to head the office of civilian defense, declared tonight that there was a "95 per cent probability" that advance precautions being taken would never be needed.

Neither he nor the President, he said, had any intention "to create a feeling of alarm or of fright," but:

"In the light of what is going on in Europe, of what we read day after day, of the death and destruction and hardship and suffering of the civilian population, no prudent government, interested in the welfare of the people, could possibly fail to appreciate its responsibility to prepare accordingly and to take no chance. That is all we are doing"

LaGuardia, whose decision concorning a third term in city hall has been a matter of much conjecture, declared he would do no campaigning but would "size up the situation" and then let "the people themselves decide." The election is next November.

"Who knows what may happen next month or the month after?" he asked in an address prepared for delivery over the municipal radio station, WNYC.

Broader Registration Will Be Considered

By the Associated Press

A plan for the voluntary registration of the millions of men above present military age was reported under consideration yesterday as Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia came here to direct the vast new civilian defense program.

Counting in more than 2,000,000 World War veterans, authorities said there were approximately 10,000,000 men in the age group of 36 through 45. (The age limits for military service registrants are 21 through 35.)

Furthermore, they pointed out, there were 27,000,000 women between ages of 21 and 46 from whom additional millions of volunteers could be drawn, if the registration were extended to cover them.

At New York, reports were current that the United States Conference of Mayors, headed by Mayor LaGuardia, might send a delegation to London soon to study the home defense system there.

It was pointed out that such a delegation might be composed largely of technical experts rather than mayors.

A final decision on adoption of the voluntary registration plan, it was said, will rest with LaGuardia to whom the President has delegated full authority for supervising the organization of civilian defenses. Such defenses include home guards, already formed in some States, air-raid warning and air-raid defense services, and the numerous services connected with recreation and social projects for men in the Army.

If LaGuardia does decide to call for civil defense volunteers, many officials believe that, without urging, literally millions of both men and women would flock to sign up. At the Office of Production Management, for example, it was reported every day's mail brings in hundreds of letters asking the same general question, "What can I do to help national defense?"

Turks Expect Nazi Attack On Cyprus

By C. L. Sulzberger
Copyright by New York Times

Ankara, May 21.—An attack on the British-owned island of Cyprus was considered an imminent possibility in military circles here tonight as the Germans rushed reinforcements to Mytilene and Chios and brought new contingents of officers and technicians to Syria in Junkers troop-carrying planes.

Cyprus and Crete are the two most important island bases in the eastern Mediterranean and as long as they remain in British hands they constitute a menace to Axis attempts to establish communication lines between occupied Aegean islands and the Syrian mainland.

The Nazi garrison of Mytilene has now been increased to 6,000 men and that at Chios to 2,000. These two islands are on the sea road from Greece to the Italian-held Dodecanese.

It is reported that a regular chain of shipping has been started between the various islands. Men are constantly being moved southward and eastward by small steamers and fishing caiques. The Italians have a large garrison on Rhodes and important naval and air bases scattered about the Dodecanese. There is a large submarine base at Leros.

Cyprus is believed to be more difficult to defend than Crete, even though it is closer to British mainland possessions. The only airport on the island is of poor quality and unusual air currents render it difficult to use. Fuel supplies are said to be limited.

Nazis Use Propaganda

It is predicted by some diplomatic sources that Germany will promise Cyprus to the Greeks before attacking it, in an effort to stir up its majority of Greek-speaking population against the British. British possession of Cyprus has for a long time been a sore point with many Greeks.

The German tactic has been to use the government of Gen. Tsolacoglou to proclaim its admiration for the Greek people and the need for the Greeks to depend on Germany to protect them.

It is thought unlikely that the people of Crete will pay much attention to the Tsolacoglou propaganda. They are a traditionally independent-minded fighting people and their island of Cretans are violent Venizelists and strongly pro-British, and the fact that Manuel Tsouderos, an old follower of Venizelos, is the premier of the refugee Greek government should count for much. This correspondent spent some time in Crete four months ago and it was evident that the British occupation of the island was popular.

Cyprus Reinforced

New York, May 21 (AP).—The British radio in a German-language broadcast reported tonight that the British garrison on the Island of Cyprus has recently been reinforced by a strong force of Australians and New Zealanders "and through the landing of new war material."

Conscription Plan for Ulster Threatens New Irish Crisis

By George Kelly
United Press Staff Writer

Belfast, May 21.—A political crisis in northern Ireland threatened tonight as Ulster Nationalists, representing about one-third of the population, sought support from Eamon de Valera in opposition to any conscription of Ulsterites for the British army.

The Ulster cabinet met in a two-hour emergency session and was reliably reported to have approved the conscription plan revealed yesterday in hints by Prime Minister Churchill.

Apparently anticipating strong opposition, Prime Minister John Miller Andrews summoned an emergency meeting of the Ulster Union Council for Friday, when he is expected to appeal for support of his Unionist followers before leaving for London Saturday to confer with Churchill.

Many of Andrews' own Unionist followers are said to be hostile toward the proposed introduction of British conscription in northern Ireland, replacing a volunteer plan of military service which has been in effect since the outbreak of the war.

Churchill told the House of Commons in London yesterday that Britain is "considering" the question of enforcing conscription among the 1,280,000 people of the northern Ulster counties.

The Ulster Nationalists already are said to be organizing a strong campaign against Andrews and the conscription proposal and to be looking to Eire for support, hoping that Prime Minister de Valera in Dublin will put Eire publicly on record against the plan.

Informed quarters said meanwhile that northern Ireland's official attitude on the war remains as it was in 1939, when the Ulster military training bill was introduced in Parliament, namely, an ardent desire that northern Ireland should share in war service equally with the rest of the United Kingdom.

Recently the war had brought its destruction to Ulster with three bombings of Belfast in the past month.

German Dye Trust Property Attached

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, May 21.—The anti-trust division of the Department of Justice took its second step here today to freeze the assets in this country of I. G. Farbenindustrie, known as the German dye trust, whose agreements with American chemical firms have been under investigation for several months.

Judge Edward A. Conger in United States District Court signed an order directing Leo Lowenthal, the United States marshal, to seize all goods, property, accounts and credits of the German trust now held by General Dyestuff Corporation.

On May 9 a court order here froze funds or credits owed I. G. Farben being held in the National City Bank of New York.

Quisling Party Shorn of State Funds by Nazis

By Bernard Valery
Copyright by New York Times

Stockholm, May 21.—Coinciding with the visit to Oslo of the German Gestapo chief, Heinrich Himmler, who arrived today, the Reich Commissar for Norway, Josef Terboven, promulgated a series of decrees extending powers of German occupation authorities in Norway to the detriment of Maj. Vidkun Quisling's party, Nasjonal Samling, which henceforth is to all intents and purposes separated from the Norwegian state.

Although it is impossible as yet to ascertain the degree by which Maj. Quisling's powers are diminished, it seems that before the almost universal opposition which Quislingites have provoked in Norway, the German authorities have finally decided to take over the job of directly organizing Norwegian life and the country's resources by means of imported German officials.

For more than a year Germans have done their best to avoid taking direct responsibility in Norway. But it is reported today in the Swedish press that a great number of German secret police and civil servants have reached Oslo.

The same reports say that by a decree of Terboven the Quislingites will no longer be allowed to use state money for party needs, since the finance ministry is ordered not to subsidize the Nasjonal Samling. From now on civil servants who spend most of the working day in the Nasjonal Samling's service must be paid by the party, not by the state. With typical thoroughness, Terboven's decree provides that even the Quisling storm troopers, the Hirden, must from now on pay their own railway fares.

These dispositions put Maj. Quisling and his party even more completely than before under German control. The party is not strong enough to subsist on its own.

Suppression of the state subsidies to Maj. Quisling's official newspaper put it in an extremely embarassing position because Norwegian advertisers, whenever they can, completely ignore "Fritt Folk." Finally the decree might very effectively prevent the country-wide propaganda rallies of the Hirden, which have always provoked grave disorders.

It is probable the German authorities to some extent will maintain Maj. Quisling and his organization for ideological propaganda and for more unpleasant jobs.

Bolivian's Art To Be Shown Here

An exhibition of the work of Marina Nunez del Prado, Bolivian sculptress, will be opened at the Pan American Union at 5 p. m. today under the sponsorship of the Minister of Bolivia and Mme. Guachalla.

Marina Nunez del Prado graduated from the Academy of Fine Arts of La Paz, Bolivia, in 1930. From 1931 to 1940 she was professor of sculpture at the academy and in 1935-36 she also taught Indo-American art at the American Institute, La Paz. She has spent the past year studying in New York on a fellowship awarded by the American Association of University Women.

Actor With Nazi Garb in London Is Unmolested

By Eddy Gilmore
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, May 21.—Prime Minister Churchill's charges that German soldiers disguised in New Zealand uniform participated in the airborne invasion of Crete inspired a high-ranking neutral here to pose this question today:

What would happen in Britain if invasion were only a problem of uniform?

Always ceremonially pictorial in the matter of dress, British thoroughfares nowadays resemble a convention of circus trainers lost in the midst of a fancy dress ball.

"There are so many uniforms in Britain now," said this neutral, "that an invader could land in a baseball uniform without exciting suspicion."

Walk down a London street and you see what he means.

The street cleaners of Westminster wear hats turned up on the side like Australians.

Telegraph messenger boys look like juvenile gendarmes of pre-armistice France.

Bank messengers wear outfits resembling the costume of oldtime minstrel men.

"Free Norwegians" could be mistaken for Royal Canadian mounted police.

Firemen look something like spear-holders in gaudy operas.

And then there are hackles which look like feathers but aren't. They bob along atop caps and hats in colors green, red and black.

Still other troops wear berets, tamoshanters, skullcaps.

Hotel doormen in some places dress like admirals and generals, while generals and admirals in some places dress like hotel doormen.

Navy men sport flowing beards, some of the army and air force wear mustaches, and lots of "Free Poles" have shaven heads.

Some weeks ago a London newspaper employed a film actor to stroll through the streets of London garbed as a German army officer—just to see if anybody would notice.

He strolled for hours, even looked in at busy Scotland Yard and peered through the gates of Buckingham Palace.

Nobody so much as gave him a dirty look.

Beckett Named District Water Division Head

Humphrey Beckett, senior engineer in the District water division, was named superintendent by the Commissioners yesterday to replace D. W. Holton, who recently retired.

The position pays $5,600 a year. To take over Beckett's erstwhile post, the Commissioners selected David V. Auld, now senior engineer of the District department of sanitary engineering. He will receive $4,600.

Beckett, 62, has been employed by the municipal government since 1901. Auld is 33. He first came to the local government in 1926. He has been detailed to PWA activities in connection with sewer projects.

U. S. Expected to Comply On Removal of Paris Diplomats

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

The United States was expected last night to comply, though not with pleasure, to a German request that American diplomats be withdrawn from Paris by June 10.

The German Foreign Office, which the State Department said made the request, did not mention the staff of United States consuls stationed in Paris and Bordeaux, and thus the State Department hoped to keep these officials at their posts.

American diplomats were withdrawn last summer, also at Germany's request, from other western European nations conquered by the Nazi military machine, but consuls were permitted to remain.

The State Department said that the Nazis made it clear they regard Paris as an "extended area of operations."

Small Staff There

The State Department maintains a small diplomatic staff in Paris in charge of Edwin A. Plitt, a consul, but under the supervision of Ambassador William D. Leahy, who is stationed in Vichy, the capital of unoccupied France.

The German attitude was said to be that these diplomats were assigned to the old French government which disappeared when France fell and that they should have followed the new regime to Vichy.

But it was also indicated that the Germans feared the diplomats would learn too much of the actual extent of German-French collaboration.

No request was made, however, for withdrawal of American consular officials from Paris. A sizable consular staff is stationed there and also in Bordeaux, German-occupied French port.

Halifax Sees Hull

Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador, conferred with Secretary of State Hull after the German request was revealed. He came to discuss French-German collaboration, he told reporters.

American diplomats have already been withdrawn from Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxembourg, Norway and Denmark. Consular officials are still functioning there, however.

The State Department was not expected to protest or retaliate to the German request.

When Italy recently ordered that two United States consulates be closed, however, Hull took reprisals, requesting that the Italians shut down their consulates at Newark, N. J., and Detroit, and that they keep the United States fully informed of the whereabouts of Italian naval and military attaches.

Loss Regretted

The Postoffice Department announced at the same time that parcel post service has been suspended from the United States to occupied and unoccupied France. Deliveries were impossible, it was stated, because British censors were seizing all packages as contraband.

The State Department expected its function to be considerably hampered by loss of the diplomatic mission in Paris.

The mission there acted as protection for a large number of Americans stranded in Paris, for American business interests there, and also as watchman for several hundred American apartments in Paris that are under the protection seal of the United States.

In addition, the Paris office of the embassy has been handling diplomatic matters for Great Britain and other belligerents.

Ex-Army Men Must File With Draft Boards

Soldiers of draft age who are discharged from the Regular Army must register for selective service training without delay even though their service exempts them, the War Department announced yesterday.

Such registration does not mean the individual would be called for training, the War Department said, but is merely to allow the selective service system to "keep their records on the nation's manpower complete."

A Congressional bill, sent to the White House Monday, exempts all registrants with three consecutive years' service in the Navy, Marine Corps or Coast Guard from selective service training. The President is expected to sign the bill shortly.

It is designed to put these men on a par with ex-Army men who received such exemption in the original draft act.

Washington selective service officials have announced that since the bill is retroactive, ex-service men already inducted may request immediate discharge.

An accompanying report, released yesterday by local selective service headquarters, breaks down classifications of registrants and inductees in the District through April 30, 1941.

The cumulative report indicated, said selective service headquarters, a drop in rejections in April over March. The figure for April was 12.5 per cent and for March 14 per cent rejections.

Few Married Men

The report showed that of 6,045 married registrants classified thus far by local draft boards, only 641 have been placed in Class 1-A available for immediate military service.

Of 114,728 registrants to date, 41,572 have been classified and 13,280 physically examined the report showed. As of April 30, 1,078 men had volunteered for one year's service. Of that number, 648 were put into Class I-A.

The report showed 1,356 requested classification into Class II-A for occupational reasons. Of this number, 143, were placed in Class I-A. Under reasons for rejections at induction stations, the report showed that of a total of 496 rejections, 195 were found physically qualified for limited service only; 158 were found physically disqualified; 80 mentally disqualified, and 50 rejected for other reasons.

Selects Wheel Trucks in Tough Going Unaware Of General Putting Biggest Through Its Paces

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Fort Meade, Md., May 21.—A brigadier general and several hundred rookie selectees gritted their teeth over the same task here today under the scorching summer sun.

Out on the Twenty-ninth Division's difficult driving course, where embryo drivers are taught to wheel heavy trucks through sand, over deeply rutted roads and up and down forbidding hills, general and private drove trucks together. The general had the biggest truck and it had a six-ton howitzer in tow.

Brig. Gen. William H. Sands, of Norfolk, Va., commanding the Fifty-fourth Field Artillery Brigade, happy over the receipt of his 176th Field Artillery of eight new six-wheel drive, four-ton trucks, went down to the difficult driving course to try it out. Hitched to the rear of the truck was one of the Pittsburgh regiment's monster 155-millimeter howitzers.

On the course, when Gen. Sands got there, were many of the regiment's 950 new selectees. These men were part of the 700 chosen from the lot to be drivers and cannoneers, who must double for each other "in case of casualties." Difficult driving is part of their training as artillerymen.

Through the sand and over sketchy woodland trails, Gen. Sands took the monster he was driving. Over the same roads, the selectees were wrestling with the big steering wheels of trucks and command cars. Up precipitous hills, in a stifling cloud of dust, groaned the great truck and gun with the general driving, selectees ahead of it and selectees behind it, all equally delighted when they reached the top without stalling or slipping.

Then Gen. Sands took the six-wheeler and the gun up an embankment as near the perpendicular as a roadway can be. At the top he stopped and mopped his brow.

"It's a wonderful vehicle," he said. "It climbs as if it was alive. Now I'm going to try it in second."

He did, and the truck pulled up the bank, gun and all, without a whimper.

Back on the other hill, the 176th's selectees were going on with their training, up hill and down, over ruts and through sand, unaware of the exalted rank of the driver operating so near them.

With addition of the eight new six-wheelers, motor vehicles of the 176th totaled 128, plus 44 trailers. When fully equipped, the regiment will have some 400 trucks and automobiles to tend its 24 howitzers and 16 75-millimeter antitank guns and the 1,500 soldiers needed to man them.

Turks Expect Nazi Attack On Cyprus

By C. L. Sulzberger
Copyright by New York Times

Ankara, May 21.—An attack on the British-owned island of Cyprus was considered an imminent possibility in military circles here tonight as the Germans rushed reinforcements to Mytilene and Chios and brought new contingents of officers and technicians to Syria in Junkers troop-carrying planes.

Cyprus and Crete are the two most important island bases in the eastern Mediterranean and as long as they remain in British hands they constitute a menace to Axis attempts to establish communication lines between occupied Aegean islands and the Syrian mainland.

The Nazi garrison of Mytilene has now been increased to 6,000 men and that at Chios to 2,000. These two islands are on the sea road from Greece to the Italian-held Dodecanese.

It is reported that a regular chain of shipping has been started between the various islands. Men are constantly being moved southward and eastward by small steamers and fishing caiques. The Italians have a large garrison on Rhodes and important naval and air bases scattered about the Dodecanese. There is a large submarine base at Leros.

Cyprus is believed to be more difficult to defend than Crete, even though it is closer to British mainland possessions. The only airport on the island is of poor quality and unusual air currents render it difficult to use. Fuel supplies are said to be limited.

Nazis Use Propaganda

It is predicted by some diplomatic sources that Germany will promise Cyprus to the Greeks before attacking it, in an effort to stir up its majority of Greek-speaking population against the British. British possession of Cyprus has for a long time been a sore point with many Greeks.

The German tactic has been to use the government of Gen. Tsolacoglou to proclaim its admiration for the Greek people and the need for the Greeks to depend on Germany to protect them.

It is thought unlikely that the people of Crete will pay much attention to the Tsolacoglou propaganda. They are a traditionally independent-minded fighting people and their island of Cretans are violent Venizelists and strongly pro-British, and the fact that Manuel Tsouderos, an old follower of Venizelos, is the premier of the refugee Greek government should count for much. This correspondent spent some time in Crete four months ago and it was evident that the British occupation of the island was popular.

Cyprus Reinforced

New York, May 21 (AP).—The British radio in a German-language broadcast reported tonight that the British garrison on the Island of Cyprus has recently been reinforced by a strong force of Australians and New Zealanders "and through the landing of new war material."

Conscription Plan for Ulster Threatens New Irish Crisis

By George Kelly
United Press Staff Writer

Belfast, May 21.—A political crisis in northern Ireland threatened tonight as Ulster Nationalists, representing about one-third of the population, sought support from Eamon de Valera in opposition to any conscription of Ulsterites for the British army.

The Ulster cabinet met in a two-hour emergency session and was reliably reported to have approved the conscription plan revealed yesterday in hints by Prime Minister Churchill.

Apparently anticipating strong opposition, Prime Minister John Miller Andrews summoned an emergency meeting of the Ulster Union Council for Friday, when he is expected to appeal for support of his Unionist followers before leaving for London Saturday to confer with Churchill.

Many of Andrews' own Unionist followers are said to be hostile toward the proposed introduction of British conscription in northern Ireland, replacing a volunteer plan of military service which has been in effect since the outbreak of the war.

Churchill told the House of Commons in London yesterday that Britain is "considering" the question of enforcing conscription among the 1,280,000 people of the northern Ulster counties.

The Ulster Nationalists already are said to be organizing a strong campaign against Andrews and the conscription proposal and to be looking to Eire for support, hoping that Prime Minister de Valera in Dublin will put Eire publicly on record against the plan.

Informed quarters said meanwhile that northern Ireland's official attitude on the war remains as it was in 1939, when the Ulster military training bill was introduced in Parliament, namely, an ardent desire that northern Ireland should share in war service equally with the rest of the United Kingdom.

Recently the war had brought its destruction to Ulster with three bombings of Belfast in the past month.

German Dye Trust Property Attached

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, May 21.—The anti-trust division of the Department of Justice took its second step here today to freeze the assets in this country of I. G. Farbonindustrie, known as the German dye trust, whose agreements with American chemical firms have been under investigation for several months.

Judge Edward A. Conger in United States District Court signed an order directing Leo Lowenthal, the United States marshal, to seize all goods, property, accounts and credits of the German trust now held by General Dyestuff Corporation.

On May 9 a court order here froze funds or credits owed I. G. Farben being held in the National City Bank of New York.

Quisling Party Shorn of State Funds by Nazis

By Bernard Valery
Copyright by New York Times

Stockholm, May 21.—Coinciding with the visit to Oslo of the German Gestapo chief, Heinrich Himmler, who arrived today, the Reich Commissar for Norway, Josef Terboven, promulgated a series of decrees extending powers of German occupation authorities in Norway to the detriment of Maj. Vidkun Quisling's party, Nasjonal Samling, which henceforth is to all intents and purposes separated from the Norwegian state.

Although it is impossible as yet to ascertain the degree by which Maj. Quisling's powers are diminished, it seems that before the almost universal opposition which Quislingites have provoked in Norway, the German authorities have finally decided to take over the job of directly organizing Norwegian life and the country's resources by means of imported German officials.

For more than a year Germans have done their best to avoid taking direct responsibility in Norway. But it is reported today in the Swedish press that a great number of German secret police and civil servants have reached Oslo.

The same reports say that by a decree of Terboven the Quislingites will no longer be allowed to use state money for party needs, since the finance ministry is ordered not to subsidize the Nasjonal Samling. From now on civil servants who spend most of the working day in the Nasjonal Samling's service must be paid by the party, not by the state. With typical thoroughness, Terboven's decree provides that even the Quisling storm troopers, the Hirden, must from now on pay their own railway fares.

These dispositions put Maj. Quisling and his party even more completely than before under German control. The party is not strong enough to subsist on its own.

Suppression of the state subsidies to Maj. Quisling's official newspaper put it in an extremely embarassing position because Norwegian advertisers, whenever they can, completely ignore "Fritt Folk." Finally the decree might very effectively prevent the country-wide propaganda rallies of the Hirden, which have always provoked grave disorders.

It is probable the German authorities to some extent will maintain Maj. Quisling and his organization for ideological propaganda and for more unpleasant jobs.

She has spent the past year studying in New York on a fellowship awarded by the American Association of University Women.

Actor With Nazi Garb in London Is Unmolested

By Eddy Gilmore
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, May 21.—Prime Minister Churchill's charges that German soldiers disguised in New Zealand uniform participated in the airborne invasion of Crete inspired a high-ranking neutral here to pose this question today:

What would happen in Britain if invasion were only a problem of uniform?

Always ceremonially pictorial in the matter of dress, British thoroughfares nowadays resemble a convention of circus trainers lost in the midst of a fancy dress ball.

"There are so many uniforms in Britain now," said this neutral, "that an invader could land in a baseball uniform without exciting suspicion."

"Free Norwegians" could be mistaken for Royal Canadian mounted police.

Firemen look something like spear-holders in gaudy operas.

And then there are hackles which look like feathers but aren't. They bob along atop caps and hats in colors green, red and black.

Still other troops wear berets, tamoshanters, skullcaps.

Hotel doormen in some places dress like admirals and generals, while generals and admirals in some places dress like hotel doormen.

Navy men sport flowing beards, some of the army and air force wear mustaches, and lots of "Free Poles" have shaven heads.

Some weeks ago a London newspaper employed a film actor to stroll through the streets of London garbed as a German army officer—just to see if anybody would notice.

He strolled for hours, even looked in at busy Scotland Yard and peered through the gates of Buckingham Palace.

Nobody so much as gave him a dirty look.

Beckett Named District Water Division Head

Humphrey Beckett, senior engineer in the District water division, was named superintendent by the Commissioners yesterday to replace D. W. Holton, who recently retired.

The position pays $5,600 a year. To take over Beckett's erstwhile post, the Commissioners selected David V. Auld, now senior engineer of the District department of sanitary engineering. He will receive $4,600.

Beckett, 62, has been employed by the municipal government since 1901. Auld is 33. He first came to the local government in 1926. He has been detailed to PWA activities in connection with sewer projects.

U. S. Expected to Comply On Removal of Paris Diplomats

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

The United States was expected last night to comply, though not with pleasure, to a German request that American diplomats be withdrawn from Paris by June 10.

The German Foreign Office, which the State Department said made the request, did not mention the staff of United States consuls stationed in Paris and Bordeaux, and thus the State Department hoped to keep these officials at their posts.

American diplomats were withdrawn last summer, also at Germany's request, from other western European nations conquered by the Nazi military machine, but consuls were permitted to remain.

The State Department said that the Nazis made it clear they regard Paris as an "extended area of operations."

Small Staff There

The State Department maintains a small diplomatic staff in Paris in charge of Edwin A. Plitt, a consul, but under the supervision of Ambassador William D. Leahy, who is stationed in Vichy, the capital of unoccupied France.

The German attitude was said to be that these diplomats were assigned to the old French government which disappeared when France fell and that they should have followed the new regime to Vichy.

But it was also indicated that the Germans feared the diplomats would learn too much of the actual extent of German-French collaboration.

No request was made, however, for withdrawal of American consular officials from Paris. A sizable consular staff is stationed there and also in Bordeaux, German-occupied French port.

Halifax Sees Hull

Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador, conferred with Secretary of State Hull after the German request was revealed. He came to discuss French-German collaboration, he told reporters.

American diplomats have already been withdrawn from Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxembourg, Norway and Denmark. Consular officials are still functioning there, however.

The State Department was not expected to protest or retaliate to the German request.

When Italy recently ordered that two United States consulates be closed, however, Hull took reprisals, requesting that the Italians shut down their consulates at Newark, N. J., and Detroit, and that they keep the United States fully informed of the whereabouts of Italian naval and military attaches.

Loss Regretted

The Postoffice Department announced at the same time that parcel post service has been suspended from the United States to occupied and unoccupied France. Deliveries were impossible, it was stated, because British censors were seizing all packages as contraband.

The State Department expected its function to be considerably hampered by loss of the diplomatic mission in Paris.

The mission there acted as protection for a large number of Americans stranded in Paris, for American business interests there, and also as watchman for several hundred American apartments in Paris that are under the protection seal of the United States.

In addition, the Paris office of the embassy has been handling diplomatic matters for Great Britain and other belligerents.

Ex-Army Men Must File With Draft Boards

Soldiers of draft age who are discharged from the Regular Army must register for selective service training without delay even though their service exempts them, the War Department announced yesterday.

Such registration does not mean the individual would be called for training, the War Department said, but is merely to allow the selective service system to "keep their records on the nation's manpower complete."

A Congressional bill, sent to the White House Monday, exempts all registrants with three consecutive years' service in the Navy, Marine Corps or Coast Guard from selective service training. The President is expected to sign the bill shortly.

It is designed to put these men on a par with ex-Army men who received such exemption in the original draft act.

Washington selective service officials have announced that since the bill is retroactive, ex-service men already inducted may request immediate discharge.

An accompanying report, released yesterday by local selective service headquarters, breaks down classifications of registrants and inductees in the District through April 30, 1941.

The cumulative report indicated, said selective service headquarters, a drop in rejections in April over March. The figure for April was 12.5 per cent and for March 14 per cent rejections.

Few Married Men

The report showed that of 6,045 married registrants classified thus far by local draft boards, only 641 have been placed in Class 1-A available for immediate military service.

Of 114,728 registrants to date, 41,572 have been classified and 13,280 physically examined the report showed. As of April 30, 1,078 men had volunteered for one year's service. Of that number, 648 were put into Class I-A.

The report showed 1,356 requested classification into Class II-A for occupational reasons. Of this number, 143, were placed in Class I-A. Under reasons for rejections at induction stations, the report showed that of a total of 496 rejections, 195 were found physically qualified for limited service only; 158 were found physically disqualified; 80 mentally disqualified, and 50 rejected for other reasons.

Mrs. DeGraw, 92, was one of the 50 persons who met in Clara Barton's Washington living room, May 21, 1881, to set up the organization that has grown to 3,700 chapters. Mrs. DeGraw has lived the past half-century at 210 Maryland Avenue Northeast, a few blocks from the Capitol. "I remember the meeting of the founders just as if it were yesterday," she says. "It was a very warm evening. Miss Barton spoke of the horrors of war and the need for an impartial society to treat the wounded"

Selects Wheel Trucks in Tough Going Unaware Of General Putting Biggest Through Its Paces

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Fort Meade, Md., May 21.—A brigadier general and several hundred rookie selectees gritted their teeth over the same task here today under the scorching summer sun.

Out on the Twenty-ninth Division's difficult driving course, where embryo drivers are taught to wheel heavy trucks through sand, over deeply rutted roads and up and down forbidding hills, general and private drove trucks together. The general had the biggest truck and it had a six-ton howitzer in tow.

Brig. Gen. William H. Sands, of Norfolk, Va., commanding the Fifty-fourth Field Artillery Brigade, happy over the receipt of his 176th Field Artillery of eight new six-wheel drive, four-ton trucks, went down to the difficult driving course to try it out. Hitched to the rear of the truck was one of the Pittsburgh regiment's monster 155-millimeter howitzers.

On the course, when Gen. Sands got there, were many of the regiment's 950 new selectees. These men were part of the 700 chosen from the lot to be drivers and cannoneers, who must double for each other "in case of casualties." Difficult driving is part of their training as artillerymen.

Through the sand and over sketchy woodland trails, Gen. Sands took the monster he was driving. Over the same roads, the selectees were wrestling with the big steering wheels of trucks and command cars. Up precipitous hills, in a stifling cloud of dust, groaned the great truck and gun with the generst driving, selectees ahead of it and selectees behind it, all equally delighted when they reached the top without stalling or slipping.

Then Gen. Sands took the six-wheeler and the gun up an embankment as near the perpendicular as a roadway can be. At the top he stopped and mopped his brow.

"It's a wonderful vehicle," he said. "It climbs as if it was alive. Now I'm going to try it in second."

He did, and the truck pulled up the bank, gun and all, without a whimper.

Back on the other hill, the 176th's selectees were going on with their training, up hill and down, over ruts and through sand, unaware of the exalted rank of the driver operating so near them.

With addition of the eight new six-wheelers, motor vehicles of the 176th totaled 128, plus 44 trailers. When fully equipped, the regiment will have some 400 trucks and automobiles to tend its 24 howitzers and 16 75-millimeter antitank guns and the 1,500 soldiers needed to man them.

The National Confuses Oldsters With Usherettes

Living 'Centaurettes' Supplant Boys on E St.; Famous Colored Quartet Is Returning to Town; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THOSE NEWLY INSTALLED USHERETTES at the National Theater are a bit disconcerting. After a decade and a half or so of barging into the E Street playhouse from two or three doors away and being greeted by a genial lot of lads we have known for years, it is disturbing to be frowned upon by a beautiful young total stranger architectured after the general design of one of Walt Disney's centaurettes in "Fantasia." That probably is what inspired the whole thing, although Manager Eddie Plohn's perceptive eye for pulchritude may have had something to do with it.

BELL

It is being bruited about that the change from male to female pilots may be a permanent thing at the National. Some of the boys who walked miles on end up and down the aisles of the only remaining legitimate theater in Washington during the past dozen years or so may now be found lined up against the wailing wall. Their perturbation is understandable. We have not as yet quite solved our own confusion.

Washingtonians who roared with laughter—and it is reported that many did—when they saw Frank Libuse in Billy Rose's "Aquacade," at the New York World's Fair, will be titillated, if that is the word, to learn that Master Libuse will headline the stage bill at Loew's Capitol Theater, come Thursday. As a perfect foil for his fast-moving piano comedy, Libuse will have Margot Brander as a partner.

If you think dancers don't dress the part, consider the case of Marina Lord, world-famed Dutch ballerina at the Earle. Formerly a premiere danseuse with the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, Miss Lord is doing her "White Peacock" number in a costume that really looks like a white peacock. The new costume is all white and consists of 1,100 Australian ostrich plumes and a peacock headdress. For this number the ballerina devised her own choreography.

Those Sepia Swingsters

Quite a bit is being said in our set about the Golden Gate Quartet, soon to be heard on the Earle stage. There is a reason for it. These singing stars of the Columbia coast-to-coast network have been blending their voice in the devious ways of modern music ever since they were kids together in grammar school. They—and that means Willie Johnson, Orlandus Wilson, William Landford and Henry Owens—are natives of Norfolk, Va., but by some strange geographical quirk were discovered in Charlotte, N. C., in 1938. They were taken to New York by John Hammond, famed high priest of swing, and scored a phenomenal hit in staid old Carnegie Hall. They were last heard in Washington on the gala concert program presented in Constitution Hall as one of the first observances of the President's Birthday Celebrations last January.

So there comes along a cordially autographed photograph of Charles Coburn in the larger dimensions—meaning the photograph, not Mr. Coburn. There was a considerable communion of spirit in our prolonged conversation upon the occasion of his recent visit to Washington in conjunction with the opening of "The Devil and Miss Jones" at RKO-Keith's. The likeness is an appreciated and a valued addition to our gallery of personally inscribed celebrities. You must come up and see them sometime. They are not etchings!

A Little Asperity Seems to Be Going on Here

ROBERT TAYLOR, MARY HOWARD AND BRIAN DONLEVY in a moment of some tenseness in "Billy, The Kid," the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, starring Mr. Taylor, which will be coming along soon to a Loew screen.

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, May 21.

From up North comes some amazing news. Mills College has never gone in much for giving honorary degrees, but this year they've broken down their rule and will bestow one on Olivia de Havilland.

HOPPER

It seems Olivia always wanted to go to college, preferably Mills. But after she had done "Midsummer Night's Dream" with an amateur group, she was snaffled up so fast by our movie producers that she was never able to fulfill her ambition. So come June she'll be honored for her acting and not her "book larning.'"

Producer Eddie Chodorov has given up his Metro job to go back to Broadway and work with Oscar Serlin, producer of "Life With Father," on "Dutch Vet," which was a very popular book about a village horse doctor in Holland who was a sort of father confessor for the village. Serlin, before leaving for the big town, also told me he's going to dramatize "AP," which is the story of the Associated Press. He's doing the outline, and then he'll get playwrights to do scenes which are up their alley.

For instance, love scenes will be written by a man who's super at that sort of thing; melodrama—ditto, etc.

Then, as I have nothing to do (!), he wanted me to take my vacation in Chicago and replace Lillian Gish in "Life With Father" while she takes hers. In spite of the compliment, I gave him a horse laugh.

They're saying in Hollywood that Hitler's found a new way of Hessing Churchill . . . But Victor Cazelet, who's in town now, says regardless of whether Hess' action is a "Trojan horse" or not, it's safer having him in England than in Berlin.

Louis Hayward is afraid to go home. Becoming bored with a long-winded discussion of the war, he wisecracked: "Isn't it strange that the fiercest fighters in the world all wear skirts? The Scots, the Greeks,—and my wife, Ida!"

They're still talking about the way Director Mike Curtiz disrupted the Navy during the filming of "Dive Bomber" at San Diego. The company was taken to sea on an enormous ship and convoyed for scenes. Mike set his cameras up and was all ready to begin shooting when the wind veered, bringing the smoke from the ship's stacks toward the camera. Mike looked up to the bridge and yelled: "Please—would you mind turning that smoke around the other way?"

Height of gallantry: When John Barrymore bumped his head on a microphone boom on the "World Premiere" set, the sound man was profuse in his apologies. "Think nothing of it," said John, airily waving the matter aside, "I've been married four times."

What famous screen star, who's been alone but doesn't like it, has suddenly fallen like a ton of bricks. The man in question is a mysterious, well-dressed Easterner.

Bette's Yarn No Fable for Gary

Bette Davis visited the "Sergeant York" set at Warner Bros. and received some unexpected help with her knitting from Gary Cooper.

Miss Davis, who was working on an adjoining sound stage, almost passed up the call because there was a big "positively no visitors" sign on the stage door. She was just turning away when Director Howard Hawks came along and escorted her in.

Then, when she was settled with her knitting, Cooper volunteered to hold the yarn.

"And that," said Bette, "is what I call perfect hospitality."

AMUSEMENTS

"The most striking achievement in cinema history."

Leonard Lyons:

New York, May 21.

ENTERPRISE: Henry Gerstley, the new head of the Philadelphia Orchestra, tells of an American who visited a card-printing plant in Moscow. The Soviet guide showed the visitor through the plant, and then proudly informed: "In the days of the Czar, we had only two presses here, eight employes, and the production was only 50 cards a week . . . At the beginning of the second 5-year plan, we had 100 presses here, 400 employes and produced 3,000 cards a week. And now, concluded the Soviet guide, "we have 300 presses, 1,200 employes and we produce 12,000 cards a week." . . . "Tell me," asked the American visitor, "what do you print on those cards?" . . . The guide picked up a handful, displayed the neat lettering, and answered: "They read: 'Elevator Not Running.'"

LEONARD LYONS

SIZE: A union official representing the I. L. G. W. U., and who is 4ft.-11 in height, waited in the City Hall foyer for an appointment with Mayor LaGuardia. In due time the mayor arrived and began walking toward his office. . . . All the policemen and officials in the foyer stood at attention, while Fiorello strode by. The tiny union official also stood up. LaGuardia walked hurridly, then hesitated for a moment beside the under-5-feet labor representative. Fiorello took one step to his side, moved his hand from the top of his own head to the top of the other's, snapped: "I'm taller than you are"—and continued on his way.

CHATTER: Paul Robeson will receive "Emperor Jones," for Richard Aldrich, at the Dennis Playhouse . . . Victor Moore, of "Louisiana Purchase," and Betty Hutton, of "Panama Hattie," are the town's newest victims of measles . . The Ranee of Sarawak went to Washington last week-end, visited Lord Halifax, and was able to obtain a priority on passage to London. She'll leave in a few days . . . Harry Richman's newest venture will be a roller-skating rink on the East Side . . . Americans who returned from Paris report that when Goering made his first purchases there, he paid in marks which were still wet from the presses. He then began paying in American dollars . . . The new movie shorts for defense work will be shown in the factories. They will show soldiers using the equipment manufactured, and will assure the workers that they, too, are heroes.

SOLUTION: Adolphe Menjou saw Dr. Leo C. Rosten, the psychologist-novelist-screen writer in the Brown Derby and confessed that the problems of the world were troubling him. "I can't sleep nights, thinking of what's the best way to solve it all," Menjou declared. "I've read John Maynard Keynes and he hasn't got it. I've read Harold Laski and Kemmerer—and they haven't got it. It's got to be big, it's got to be dramatic—something like air conditioning the jungle of Brazil."

SUCCESS: Boris Karloff will net more than $50,000 profit—in addition to his salary—out of his $6,000 investment in the production of "Arsenic & Old Lace." Before the rehearsals began, producers Lindsay and crouse were offered over $100,000 by friends who wanted to invest. They decided, however, to permit members of the cast to buy an interest in the production. Allyn Joslyn, who won such favorable reviews for his performance, made his decision too late. . . . Karloff invested when Russel Crouse told him: "We'll hold a share open for you until the day after the show opens on Broadway. After you read the drama reviews and you feel that you'd like a share, we'll let you buy.". Karloff invested immediately.

TRANSLATION: Ernest Hemingway's "For Whom the Bell Tolls" now is being translated into Spanish, in preparation for distribution in the Latin American market . . . In the American edition, Hemingway deleted the censorable English phrases by substituting the words: "Obscenity in thy obscenity," etc., but retained the Spanish cuss words . . . In the Spanish edition, English cuss words will be substituted for "Obscenity" and "Obscenity" will be used instead of the censorable Spanish phrases.

DANCE: Geoffrey Gorer, the English anthropologist at Yale University, made his first visit to a night club after he returned from a trip to Samoa. He described the scene, from the viewpoint of a visiting Samoan . . . Gorer pointed to the frozen-faced rumba dancers, and began: "This, obviously, is an occasion of mourning, since those engaged in the ritualistic dances are grave and solemn, and control their emotions . . . The people around the ringside are either the Elders of the Society, or relatives of the deceased."

LAMENT: Jo Swerling, the scenarist, is prizing an essay written by his young son, who was born and raised in Hollywood. At school in the English composition class, the boy decided to write an essay about a Poor Hollywood Family . . . "It was a very poor Hollywood family, the boy began. "The father and mother both were poor. Their chauffeur was poor and the butler was poor, and the gardener, nurse and maid also were poor. It was a very poor Hollywood family."

Management Society Convenes Here

Problems of obtaining closer cooperation between public and private management in the defense program will be the theme of the Society for the Advancement of Management's two-day spring conference opening this morning at the Wardman Park Hotel, the society announced yesterday.

Principal speakers at today's sessions include William L. Batt, deputy director of the OPM production division; Floyd W. Reeves, OPM director of labor supply and training; George Soule, editor of the New Republic; Alvin H. Hansen, Harvard economics professor, and Paul F. Douglass, president of American University.

The 9:30 a. m. conference, at which Batt will speak, is to be devoted to "The Morale Factor in Defense." After luncheon, speakers will discuss optimum use of skills and capacities. At 3:15 p. m., planning for readjustment of the national economy after the defense emergency will be discussed.

At the dinner meeting, Dr. Douglass will speak on "Dynamic Democracy."

Whitehurst Speeds Action On Highways

Acting to hasten consideration of the recent Highway Planning Survey report by the Budget Bureau and Congress, Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, announced yesterday he is preparing a digest of testimony at Tuesday's public hearing for immediate transmission to the Commissioners.

The Commissioners, in turn, have promised early action on their recommendations to budget and Congressional leaders.

Whitehurst's proposal of a 2-cent gasoline tax increase to finance the $44,000,000 series of projects appears to be the principal bone of contention among civic, business and auto club representatives who testified at the hearing.

Meanwhile, in the caucus room of the old House Office Building today, hearings will begin on the bill of Representative Howard Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, to authorize studies of a proposed tunnel crossing of the Potomac River from Alexandria. The hearings will begin at 10 a. m.

The measure provides $25,000 for a joint Federal, State and municipal study of the proposed project—which is entirely separate from the $9,000,000 tunnel plan suggested in the Whitehurst planning report.

In view of comments at Tuesday's public hearing on the Whitehurst report to the effect that "not one penny" should be paid by the District for construction of the proposed tunnel, it appears likely the item will be eliminated and left directly up to Virginia and Federal authorities.

Invited to attend hearings on the Smith bill is Thomas H. MacDonald, public roads administrator; the District Commissioners and representatives of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, the Fine Arts Commission, the Corps of Army Engineers, the American Automobile Association and the Washington Board of Trade.

In addition, Carl Budwesky, city manager of Alexandria, and officials of Arlington County have been asked to testify.

Lansburgh & Co. Plan Addition

Completion of a six-story addition to the Lansburgh & Bro. department store immediately south of the main building in the 400 block of Eighth Street Northwest is expected by fall, officials of the company announced yesterday.

A mezzanine floor and basement will be included in the new structure. A direct entrance to the basement and a soda fountain extension on the main floor, permitting an increase of 50 per cent in seating capacity, also will be features of the new building.

Increased aisle and selling space is promised by store officials as the result of the expansions. The addition will occupy the space recently filled by a small service building.

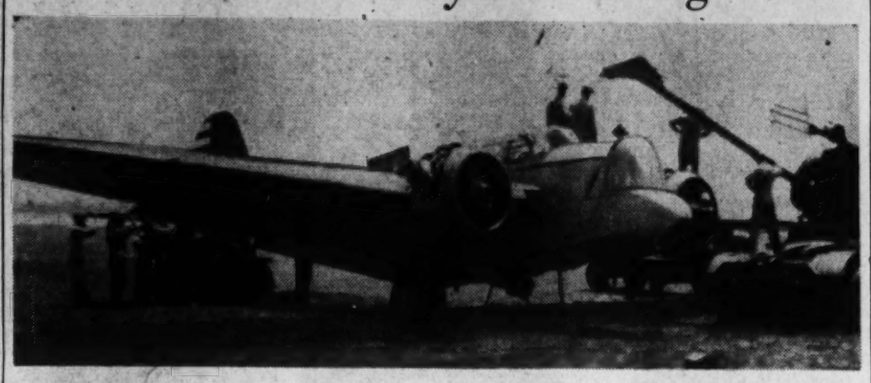
Bomber Landed Safely After Losing Wheel



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

THREE PARACHUTE TO SAFETY—This United States Army bomber was landed safely by its pilot yesterday after a wheel was lost in the take-off at Mitchel Field, N. Y. Three persons parachuted to safety after the pilot flew the plane to 2,000 feet and ordered them to abandon ship

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 21 (INS).—The agile, graceful Zorina flys right into Hollywood and right out again on Sunday. She comes here at the request of Buddy De Sylva to make a technicolor test for "Louisiana Purchase" and the role she created on the stage.

LOUELLA PARSONS

So beautifully has Buddy worked out the schedule that the premier danseuse will only miss the Monday night performance on the New York stage. Paramount has a terrific budget for "Louisiana Purchase," which includes Bob Hope, as we have already told you, with Irving Cummings directing.

Not surprising that Warners did a marathon to get Mary Astor's name on a contract. She was so good in "The Great Lie" that it almost seemed as if a new star were born. Bette Davis, who is very friendly with Mary, gave her a chance that few stars would give another woman—a role equal to her own. Mary's first on the New Deal is the femme lead in "Knight of Malta," based on "The Maltese Falcon," the Dashiell Hammet novel which stars George Raft.

Joseph von Sternberg, who has been spending his time on his ranch in San Fernando Valley, coming in town only now and then, has signed a contract with Arnold Pressburger to direct "Shanghai Gesture." This is the very first picture Joe has made in nearly two years and the story of Mme. Goddam and Poppy is right down his alley, so to speak. Pressburger is trying to borrow Barbara Stanwyck to play Poppy—the young girl.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The Frank Tuttles have dated the stork for November; Phyllis Brooks, back in town for the first time in months, dining at the Beverly Derby with Fred Brisson; Norma Shearer; our best commuter, goes East Monday. Wonder if Ronnie Balcom is the attraction Nedda Harrigan is being taken everywhere by John Koenig; the Johnny Weissmullers came from Catalina just for the fight at Wrigley Field. The Bob Hopes, the Jack Bennys and Alice Faye and Phil Harris were others in ringside seats; John Payne and Robert Stack flew East today in honor of Rosie Dolly; Cesar Romero goes East on a personal in Springfield, Mass., and then takes a vacation in New York.

Tom Brown and Dorothy O'Kelly have cooled after being inseparable for months; K. T. Stevens, Sam Wood's pretty daughter, and George Montgomery a Brown Derby twosome; Betty Grable and George Raft never missing a dance at Ciro's; Bert Lahr gets here Monday to talk to M-G-M about playing the role he created in "Dubarry Was a Lady" for the movies.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

'Bone-Headedness' at Army Camp Charged by Truman

By the Associated Press

Jacksonville, Fla., May 21.—Chairman Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, of the special Senate committee investigating national defense expenditures, declared today "bone-headedness" and "lack of business ability" had caused "gross waste" of Government funds during the construction of Camp Blanding near here.

Opening the second session of a public hearing on reasons why the big Army training center cost "$20,000,000 more than the original estimate of $9,000,000," Senator Truman said a personal inspection of the camp caused him to conclude that "anybody with horse sense could have picked out a site which would have cost half the present total."

Lieut. Col. Arthur Wilson, of the Army's General Staff, testified the War Department established the training center for 55,000 troops 45 miles southwest of here because the Florida National Guard already had begun construction of a camp there and because the area offered good facilities for artillery practice and infantry maneuvers.

Lieut. Col. Wilson said Brig. Gen. James Frink, quartermaster for the Fourth Corps Area, approved the site for the War Department.

Striking At Crete

The Battle of the Eastern Mediterranean is a battle of many fronts. First in importance is Egypt, where, for a month, the panzer columns that swept across Libya have been held up in the vicinity of Salum. Then there is the fighting in Iraq between British forces and the followers of the pro-Nazi premier, Rashib Ali el-Gailani. Last week, too, Syria became a battlefield when the R. A. F. began to attack airfields being used by German planes en route to Iraq. Now the Nazis are seeking to dislodge the British from the island of Crete, the last considerable stretch of Greek territory not in Hitler's possession.

After a glance at the map the importance of the Nazi air-borne attack on Crete becomes obvious. Possession of Crete would complete the encirclement of Turkey which had already been half accomplished by the Nazi appearance in the Black Sea. But the Nazi move is destined for far more extensive game. Another hop, and the Nazi would land at Cyprus, the last island fortress in the eastern Mediterranean, which is but a short distance from the Syrian littoral. Disraeli called it "the key to western Asia." No wonder, therefore, that the British intend to defend Crete to the death. It is a desperate risk that the Nazis have taken, for the Allied forces in the island had been forewarned of the attempt and are at an advantage in dealing with parachutists. It almost seems an expedition of a suicide corps. However, the Nazis have won so many striking victories in the Mediterranean, and have given such ample evidence that they are not given to unprepared adventures, that the onlooker must suspend judgment till more details are received.

This caution, indeed, is commended by the British premier himself. Winston Churchill has warned the British that the battle for Crete might continue with "increasing severity" for some time. His caution, as usual, is well-advised, since the Nazis are sending constant reinforcements to those units they have succeeded in landing on the island. To them Crete is tied up with the bigger battle. The fact that the German forces in Egypt have failed to make headway, and have given the British time to add to their manpower and material in that vital sector, makes the struggle in Crete all the more important to the Germans. To clear the British out of that island Hitler may be prepared to make great sacrifices. For the time being, however, the British appear to be holding their own in the fight.

Highways Cost Money

The community has voiced unrestrained approval of Capt. H. C. Whitehurst's plan of highway improvements. It is evident to anyone familiar with Washington's street system that the projects sponsored by the director of highways would greatly facilitate the flow of traffic. Considering the rapid growth of the city, moreover, it is also clear that a major program of street improvements and parking lot development cannot long be postponed. Capt. Whitehurst's plan came at a time when Washingtonians were in an especially receptive mood.

Dissent crept into the hearings before the Commissioners, however, when ways and means of financing this program came up for discussion. The spokesmen for several civic groups that are enthusiastic about the plan itself balked at the suggested 2-cent increase in the gasoline tax to raise the necessary funds. This is equivalent to saying that the projects outlined by Capt. Whitehurst are desirable and necessary but we can't afford them. Should the community as a whole take this attitude, there will be very little hope of carrying out the Whitehurst plan in the next decade.

Even if the gasoline tax is increased to finance this program, it will not be out of line with the levies imposed on motor fuel by most of the States. The saving in time to motorists who now waste hours every month in traffic snarls would probably be worth more to them than the extra cost of gasoline under the Whitehurst proposal. Nor can the increased safety of a well-planned highway system be disregarded. Washingtonians ought to weigh these benefits carefully against the proposed boost in the gasoline tax. For it is certain that we cannot eat our cake and have it too.

Drafting Ships

Now is the time for our Merchant Marine to come to the aid of national defense. Congress has spent large sums of money in recent years to strengthen our commercial fleet and permit the construction of new ships. Those expenditures were approved, at least in part, to prepare the Merchant Marine to meet precisely the type of emergency that now contronts us. In reality the Merchant Marine is an auxiliary of the Navy. When war or any other great emergency threatens, it must serve the national interest as faithfully as if the vessels under the American flag were actually owned by the Government.

In passing the Bland bill, therefore, the House was merely preparing the way for the Merchant Marine to assume its proper function in this critical period. That bill would give the President and the Maritime Commission sweeping new powers over the use of American ships, the movement of cargoes, and the rates charged for transportation by water. Most of the shipping companies are already cooperating with the Government in moving defense materials, but a few have refused to adhere to the voluntary plan. The necessity of using every ship to the best advantage is so great that we must not run the risk of relying solely upon voluntary cooperation.

Many factors have contributed to the "serious shortage of merchant shipping" referred to by the House Committee on Merchant Marine in reporting out this bill. Some foreign vessels have stopped carrying American cargoes. The defense program has greatly increased the quantity of our strategic imports. The transportation of supplies to the island bases we acquired from Great Britain has also put a heavy burden on the merchant fleet, and a number of vessels have been taken over by the Army and Navy for their own use. So the number of ships has been reduced at a time when the demand for transportation by sea has greatly increased. It thus becomes imperative to establish a strict system of priorities for shipping. Every vessel must be sent where it will best serve the national interest as determined by the President and the Maritime Commission.

Passage of the bill by the Senate may be taken for granted. In times like these Government control over the Merchant Marine is scarcely less essential than control over the Navy itself. In effect, Congress is drafting ships for the duration. Certainly that is not to be regarded as a drastic step when men have been responding to the draft for several months.

Much Ado

Well, perhaps our Mr. Roosevelt hasn't got the stuff of a dictator in him, after all. You will recall that when Gaius Julius Caesar decided to change the calendar, it stayed changed for upward of 1,500 years. Not so with Mr. Roosevelt's decision to alter the date of the Thankgiving festival. He now confesses that his experiment was a mistake and, as of 1942, the date of national observance will revert to the last Thursday in November.

When the President two years ago sought to advance the celebration by one week, he argued that it would shorten the long, unrelieved stretch that follows Labor Day, and would benefit retail business by extending the Christmas shopping season by six full days. In fact, said the President, it was the retail businessmen who had suggested the change to him in the first place. The idea of Mr. Roosevelt being influenced in his executive conduct by the desires of businessmen caused not a few lifted eyebrows even among his admirers and provoked even louder and more explosive snorts than usual in the lounges and bars of the clubs. As for the change itself, a Nation already grievously divided on so many issues was divided anew as to its virtue. The Governors of about half the States followed the President in proclaiming the celebration of Thanksgiving Day, 1939, on November 23. But others stubbornly insisted on delaying the celebration until November 30. Gov. Saltonstall of Massachusetts, implicitly claiming a special authority in the matter, deplored the President's efforts to secularize a religious occasion. Three States managed to be neutral by celebrating both dates impartially. It was probably in these States, incidentally, that the President's idea found most popularity.

However, the controversy, which for a few days threatened to split Americans as grievously as, some centuries ago, Russian Christians were divided over the spelling of certain words in the liturgical books, gradually lost its point. It was remembered that the Pilgrim Fathers had celebrated Thanksgiving immediately after the harvest, which would probably mean in October, and that they had devoted a whole week to it. Then the merchants were disappointed to discover that the extra six shopping days had no appreciable effect on Christmas sales. Thus the moral of the whole thing seems to be that it gave us something pleasanter to worry about than events in Europe. Meanwhile, any citizen who may prefer to celebrate Thanksgiving, 1942, a week ahead of the traditional date will doubtless be permitted to do so. Nor is there yet anything in the statutes or executive orders to prevent any of us from returning thanks to God for His benefits on any or every other day of the year.

Big-Man Job

The President's appointment of New York's Mayor, Fiorello H. LaGuardia, to head the Office of Civilian Defense makes one wonder just how importantly the new agency will figure in the defense scheme. On the face of it, the job of coordinating the plans of Federal, State and local governments for home defense ought to be enough to keep even the fiery "Little Flower" busy seven days of the week. Yet the President has announced definitely that the task will not require Mayor LaGuardia to relinquish his post as New York's chief executive.

Certainly the announced scope of the OCD program is staggering enough. Regional offices will be set up in areas matching the nine Army Corps Areas, and from these centers will radiate instruction work in all those means of civilian defense which the harassed inhabitants of bombed areas had to learn in the turmoil of war. How to use bomb shelters, quell hysteria, put out fires, administer first aid—these are jobs requiring some degree of training. Then the home guard units must be integrated to protect bridges, culverts, power stations and other key objectives of enemy attack. Not only will the OCD have to concern itself with these physical details of defense; it will have to convince citizens that these details are necessary—an educational task which must take precedence and which, indeed, may be the greatest of all the duties of the OCD. Certainly this is a job and a half for the man at the top, even with the utmost delegation of responsibility and the best organizational setup.

The President could scarcely have picked an abler administrator or a more dynamic personality than Mayor LaGuardia. His record in Congress and in New York's City Hall demonstrates his capacities as an "all-out" executive. It seems hard to believe, therefore, that if heading the OCD is to be as important as it has been made to appear, the mayor will long be able to discharge the responsibilities of his two jobs with his customary energy and personal satisfaction.

It was not the Red Cross that told us of its sixtieth birthday yesterday, for if it had we should have been forearmed with a tribute to this splendid but self-effacing organization for the day of its jubilee. Another newspaper, evidently, had jotted down the date on its calendar. On inquiry we were told that the day, in fact, was its sixtieth birthday, but that there would be no celebration. Actually the occasion was observed by the organization going quietly ahead with its plan to ship $500,000 worth of food to Eire.

The efficiency and modesty of the Red Cross ceased long ago, however, to be a subject of comment. Yet the difficulties of speeding relief to distressed areas have seldom, if ever, been greater. Since the war started, the Red Cross has distributed more than $35,000,000 in money and goods to sufferers in the stricken areas. That only a few shipments have been lost is, of course, a matter of luck, for the world has had sufficient proof that the Nazis are no respecters of the great red emblem of mercy. Doubtless we should prepare ourselves for further losses. The Red Cross has already done so, confident that its 8,700,000 adult members will rise to any emergency, however severe. In almost any other venture this attitude might fairly be deemed complacent. Actually such faith is a telling index of the state of mind in every country which merits being considered civilized.

INDIFFERENCE

By night the long grass blew
And where, above the height, the stars were few,
We did not mark
The gathering cloud; the dark beyond the dark,
Seeing no worlds beyond the world we knew.

By day the poppies flared,
And in the fields the grass was golden-haired;
We did not mark, or see
Which bird it was that sang exultantly,
Sensing no bliss beyond the bliss we shared.

Now time nor tide perceives
The light low mound beneath the fallow leaves
Wherein you sleep;
The evening fields no least remembrance keep,
Nor is the rose made mindful in the eaves.

Such is the way with all!
Unseen the apple blossoms by the wall,
And ere we yet behold
The reddening fruitage touched with sunset gold,
Night comes, and we ourselves are past recall.

Of All-American Music

It was something of a surprise to read, at the end of Ray C. B. Brown's "Postlude" on the performance of the All-American Youth Orchestra last Wednesday, "An All-American group could very fittingly play all-American concerts, and this ideal should be added to the others." This is, in my opinion, an exceedingly questionable ideal.

In the first place, the measure of music is not the birthplace of the composer nor his political ideology (if any), but at a time when it has been forgotten in a great many countries, Americans should be more than careful to remember it.

In the second place, to say that this All-American orchestra should play all-American music is essentially to change the emphasis of the word. As Mr. Stokowski uses it, it seems to me, all-American is a broad term. The only basis for membership in the orchestra is musical ability and skill. From all the diverse peoples that make the population of America, no young person is either accepted or rejected on any other ground. But to recommend for such an orchestra the playing of all-American music is in effect to change "all" to "only." For to play all American music would be to leave out a very great amount of music that should be known and played by Americans—and this will be true even when the contribution of American composers to the world's great music is much larger than it now is. All-American should not imply exclusion; it should remain an inclusive expression.

It is worth something that in America an all-American orchestra is able to play the music of composers of all nations.

Women In Defense

At a meeting, held on Monday evening, the Business and Professional Women's Club of the District of Columbia voted their sincere appreciation and gratitude for the very interesting series of articles, published in The Post, by Inez Robb, on Women in America's Key Defense Industries.

Letter To The President

Mr. President: Last November this Nation elected you as its leader. We chose you as the American best-suited to guide us through the most critical period in our history.

What is holding you back? Why not do some leading? As a Nation, we have given you a free rein. We have handed you the "big stick." Why not use it? Why not stop this "do nothing, dare nothing" attitude? With delay so detrimental and costly, are you afraid of stepping on a few toes?

As our leader, it is your responsibility that strikes do not hamper our national defense effort. The enormous loss in man-hours of labor during the last four months is appalling. And apparently "we ain't seen nothin' yet." What are you doing about it?

It is your responsibility to insure that no communistic activity mar our efforts should a declaration of war become necessary. It is your responsibility to make sure that our lend-lease program affords material aid and not ornaments for Davy Jones Locker. Yet you still advocate "no convoys." What are you doing about the delivery of these articles?

You say we need speed, speed, and more speed. Take a look at our own backyard. Travel through Michigan, Pennsylvania and Ohio and see how few factories are on 24-hour shifts. See how many are not using all their facilities for one 8-hour shift. It is your responsibility to insure that our defense program is not hampered by red tape and incompetency.

A good many of us Americans could tear our hair at our dilatory national defense efforts. And all we can do is beseech you to do something. Supplant the talkers with doers, the mediators with actionists. Let us get things done now and do them fast before it is again "too little and too late."

Freedom Of Speech

Westbrook Pegler is a hard-hitter and generally slugs where slugging is needed. But he can be mistaken and can make a distorted presentation, as in one instance is shown by the letter of Charles F. Gropper in your issue of May 8, headed "Phelps-Dodge Mining Co. in 1917."

Another instance of distorted presentation is Pegler's article headed "Freedom of Thought" in the same issue of The Post. While "convinced that Lindbergh and Wheeler are wrong in believing this Nation could live free and prosperous in the same world with a victorious Hitler," he undertakes to represent that their freedom of thought and speech are gravely threatened by those who controvert their wrong position and retort to their criticisms and charges. While according the tribute of "intelligent, honest discussion" to "Lindbergh and Wheeler," who, Pegler says, "are sincerely mistaken," he employs most freely strong derogatory phraseology in characterizing the discussion of those who are opposing this "wrong, mistaken," and necessarily dangerous attitude for the Nation.

Pegler and those who are so disturbed because Lindbergh, Wheeler, et al., have had to endure some retorts to their constant insinuations against other persons whom the people of this country know are as patriotic and intelligent, with respect to the true interests of this Nation, as Lindbergh, Wheeler, et al., ever were or ever will be, should regain their equilibrium by recognizing the truth of the following that has just been expressed by Secretary Ickes with his accustomed perspicacity:

"Those who argue that the right of free speech operates as a gag to silence others who would criticize a critic are way off base. . . . There is no constitutional guaranty that a man who expresses himself on a public question has the right of a monologist. Free speech on the part of Mr. Lindbergh does not exclude, supplant, or destroy the same privilege for him who dislikes what Mr. Lindbergh says. To suggest . . . that anyone who criticizes Mr. Lindbergh is an enemy of free speech is not only to be silly; it is in the spirit of Hitlerism. The Nazi Fuehrer . . . believes that only one side—his side—should be free to talk. The other side has only the right to shut up."

And that is about the assumption of those who resort to the ridiculous demagoguery of saying, in effect: "If our opponents do not shut up they are shamefully abusing us and denying to us freedom of thought and speech, although we are talking all the time and the only action taken against us is that of verbal retort and criticism."

JOHN D. BRADLEY.
Takoma Park, Md, May 19.

Self-Preservation

Convoys now mean a shorter war—a surer defeat of Hitler. Delay eventually means either war on our own shores, economic strangulation, or disintegration from within. Self-preservation being the first law of nature, let us preserve our country by protecting our shipments to Britain.

Oceanic Barriers

People here seem to be convinced that even should England fall, Hitler is no direct menace. Every time you so much as hint that it became uncomfortable, they point to 3,000 miles of water. If it is true that Hitler with the combined fleets of Germany, France, Italy, and England cannot cross the Atlantic Ocean, why are we worrying at all about Japan, which has only one navy and the Pacific Ocean to cross?

Acts Of War Vs. Acts Of Piracy

Your editorial on the Zamzam this morning, with which I thoroughly agree, inspires me to make these juridical comments.

Not every act of a warfaring state is an act of war. It is only an act of war if it observes the international rules of warfare. Acts committed during wartime, but not covered by international law, are not acts of war, but acts of piracy or barbarism. War between civilized nations is like a boxing match, not like a holdup. This is one of the characteristics of a civilized nation. If one of the boxers does not keep to the rules—e.g., uses a hidden knife, he is no more a fighter, but a murderer. A similar law rules nations.

If, in time of peace, a man-of-war confiscates the ship of another nation because its country needs or likes the goods shipped on it, that would not be an act of war, but of piracy. If in times of war neutral ships or enemy ships with neutral goods are sunk on the high seas without warning, even if the passengers are saved (as you point out in the case of the Zamzam) that is not an act of war, but piracy. The act does not change its character because we have become accustomed to it. Reiteration does not render a crime legal, neither does the fact that punishment might have been forgotten or postponed.

It is no act of war and therefore there cannot be a claim to be treated as such if warships sink ships with civilians, women, and children on board, even if they have contraband on board. It may then be confiscated, but not sunk.

Reactions against such acts are not acts of war, but international police measures. The right to suppress such acts, to prevent them, to destroy the offenders, has been recognized by all civilized nations in the common struggle against piracy. It is, indeed, one of the backbones of international law. International law is not so weak and vague as is frequently supposed; only its enforcement sometimes is.

As a foreign lawyer visiting this country I will abstain from an examination of what acts would be appropriate for the suppression and prevention of international crimes. But as an international lawyer I feel myself entitled to expose the confusion of acts of war and international crime on one side and acts of war and of international police on the other side.

The Post Impressionist

Purely Personal

The only physical exercise we take is waving to our friends, which is mighty little since we have few friends. True enough, there is some exercise in hoisting a few beers now and then, a habit we are proud of, but in the main we are a languid and indolent person.

This unusual attitude toward exercise springs from the fact that we once knew a fellow who developed a sudden passion for muscles and died four months after a sudden indulgence in violent exercise.

Physical exercise is the Great American Obsession and is as indigenous to this country as popcorn, chewing gum and baseball. In no other civilized part of the world, to our personal knowledge at least, do men, women and children exhibit the mad desire to punch, run, kick, walk and commit mayhem as one sees in this Republic. As our contribution to this country, we have formed a secret society of Indolence, Inc., the sole qualification for membership being complete physical inactivity.

Not many years ago we were the firebrand type of revolutionary. We were no pinko, but just downright red, advocating anarchy with a few bombs thrown in for good measure. We had a passionate dislike for any person with $10 in a savings account. We were, in short, a phony liberal, something like the type in vogue today, only we were a little more noisy.

We delighted in all-night bull sessions, decrying the rich, capitalism, and all forms of government. In this retrospect, we now see much of our adolescent nonsense was prompted by large quantities of bad gin, coupled with unemployment. Give us four shots of gin and we became, forthwith, extremely prolix on subjects which, when sober, we did not even understand.

Our bitterness toward society changed with our first job. We became arrogant overnight and we lost all patience with the jobless. The first to ridicule bank accounts, we rushed immediately to open a savings account upon receipt of our first $20 pay check. We became haughty and smug. In a short time we began reading the financial pages of the newspapers, ever on the alert to make an honest dollar without benefit of personal labor, a human practice we had so long ago decried in others.

The American expression, "in my humble opinion," is a constant source of amusement to us. The terms "humble" and "opinion" are mutually exclusive. Like oil and water, they simply do not go together. At least that is our opinion, but certainly not our "humble" opinion, for in expressing opinions we have never made any pretense at humility, a virtue of which we are very proud.

The fact is that people with opinions are usually arrogant and foolish and not worth listening to. For this reason we have assiduously refrained from expressing opinions on the most obvious of subjects (although we sometimes forget), realizing such expressions make us appear more of a dunce than we really are.

This leads to our observation of another American complex, the passionate reliance on "authority." As a class, Americans possess a curious desire to quote "authorities" to buttress an argument. When cornered in an argument, the average American relies on quotations from Shakespeare, George Washington and Lincoln. What these estimable gentlemen and their words have to do with present-day problems and their solutions is something we cannot understand.

If we really had our way we would have chosen carpentry or economics as a livelihood. Unfortunately, we did not possess the physical strength or mental acumen to be a carpenter, but now, when we look back, we think we would have made a splendid economist under proper tutelage. A short digression will clarify this attitude.

As it turned out, our years of college work proved to be a fresh-air course in the art of how not to do things. We came away with a sheepskin, knowing something about everything and nothing about anything. At the ripe age of 23 we found ourself distressingly confused, incompetent and totally unfit to make a living. With a "cultural" background in the classics, we finally got a job as a house-to-house canvasser for a publishing house and, later, as a sailor in the merchant marine, from which we were fired for incompetence.

We regret now that we did not pursue our studies further by majoring in economics. We probably would have been a doctor of economics today, making a fabulous amount of money in some business house. We say this because our whole academic background formed a splendid basis for the study of economics, which is nothing more than the art of confusing people.

We are an extraordinarily obtuse person, which, we believe, fits us for the profession of economics. We have an innate knack for making simple matters appear complicated, and what better qualification for the science of economics can we offer than that? Clarity to us, as to the genuine economist, is an abomination, and we possess a magnificent talent for confusing people by the employment of words and phrases which few understand. The doctors of obfuscation lost an outstanding candidate when they failed to get us.

EUGENE KELLY.

Arcadian Spring

Your "Arcadian Spring" editorial in The Post of May 7 gave me the same thrill that I always experience when I hear Fritz Kreisler's beautiful "Dream of Youth." Your Arcadia was so graphically descriptive of the Washington of my memory. It was like turning the pages of a story book, long put away, whose yellowed pages only mellow and cast a spell of dreaming over a mind too long schooled to the tempo of the present day.

Nazi Pretensions In Central America

AS THE SHADOWS of war lengthen over America and the defense of the Panama Canal becomes a matter of immediate concern, the role of the six small republics forming Central America take on a new and ever-growing interest. Much may depend in the near future upon the question of whether or not these states are loyal to the cause of the fighting democracies.

Every military and naval expert today is convinced of the vital importance of Costa Rica, not only because it is one of the most important links in the system of hemispherical defense, due to its nearness to the Panama Canal, but also because it is, without contest, the model country of Central America. Likewise convinced of its strategic importance are the potential enemies on either side of the oceans, as the increasing activities of the totalitarian powers attest.

For one thing, the Pacific coastline of this country provides some of the deepest, most spacious and best-sheltered natural harbors that any armada could desire. The Bay of Culebra, for example, which forms part of the northwestern Provinces of Guanacaste, has been rated by United States experts as possessing the best potential naval bases between California and the Canal Zone; a manifold bigger Navy than the United States at present possesses could be easily accommodated in this vast natural harbor. Another suitable spot is Golfo Dulce, a little farther south, where the United Fruit Co. is at present busy building new docks and railroad facilities, in view of the expanding banana growth in that region.

For another thing, the 175 miles transcontinental railway system which links the capital, San Jose, with Port Limon, on the Atlantic, and Puntarenas, on the Pacific, is thought by experts to come in very handy for the transshipment of goods and passengers between the two oceans, in the event that the Panama Canal traffic should be reduced or momentarily blocked through enemy action.

NATURALLY, if the harbors and railroads of Costa Rica thus represent great assets in the planning of hemisphere defense, they would, conversely, constitute a very serious threat in the hands of a potential enemy. I do not think, however, that the rumors one hears occasionally about this or that totalitarian scheme against this little country need, as yet, be taken seriously. For all his daredevilishness and cunning, one simply cannot see how any white or yellow Hitler could get his forces through to this country so long as the balance of naval power remains as it stands today.

However, we must never forget that the Nazis, and their Far Eastern allies too, are long-term planners and we may be sure that they are both now already dreaming of, and preparing for, the day when the British Fleet will have been put out of business and the flanks of America stand exposed to attack.

Still for the time being, Fifth Column activities in this, as in other Central American countries, must necessarily confine themselves to somewhat less ambitious aims than a military invasion in the near future; propaganda in favor of a "neutrality" that would obstruct the moves of the United States and the preparation of sabotage acts are the chief practical objects for the moment.

There is a sizable German colony in Costa Rica which is currently figured approximately at 1,000 members of the first and second generation. A large majority of these are undoubtedly Hitlerites, but many of the businessmen (and a considerable percentage of the trade as well as of the coffee land here is in German hands) prefer, for obvious reasons, to keep aloof from all too conspicuous Nazi manifestations.

THE GERMAN Legation, however, is not lying low. It is just now very busy, as a number of recent incidents have demonstrated. Like all German diplomatic representations nowadays, it is considerably overstaffed. The residence of the German Minister accredited to this country, Herr Otto Reineback, is in Guatemala, but there is a charge d'affaires here, Felix Tripeloury, who has now a bigger personnel at his orders than before the war when Germany's trade with Costa Rica was flourishing. The significance of this fact is manifest.

Since there is no longer any trade to speak of possible between the two countries, Hitler's envoy here is now concentrating on "cultural relations," which means, of course, propaganda. Twice during the last few weeks the postmaster-general of Costa Rica, Don Jorge Orozco Castro, has returned to the German Legation a whole carload of propaganda pamphlets which were considered unmailable because they were full of invective against the British government and people. A well-known Nazi propagandist here, Juan Navarrete, recently admitted that the weekly expenditure of the legation for postal stamps alone averaged 120 colones.

The attitude of the postmaster-general in this matter reflects the firm stand adopted by the present government where Nazi activities in this country are concerned. The new president of the Republic, who took office on May 8, 1940, Dr. Rafael Angel Calderon Guardia, has no sympathy for the Nazis. He is a good democrat and a stanch Catholic. His beautiful wife, Dona Ivonne Clays de Calderon Guardia, is a Belgian by birth and can hardly nourish any sympathies for the barbarous invaders of her downtrodden country.

A continuous source of preoccupation for the Costa Rican government is the presence of two Axis vessels, the German Eisenach and the Italian Fella in the Gulf of Nicoya, just off Puntarenas, chief Pacific port of this country. Originally the German ships numbered three. They had taken refuge in this port at the outbreak of the war, but two have left in the meantime, probably to join the German raider squadron in the Pacific.

ON VARIOUS occasions, of late, the customs authorities of Puntarenas have had to deal with unauthorized attempts at communication between the crew of the Eisenach (and to a minor extent of the Fella) and the numerous German residents of that region.

The people of Costa Rica, proud of a century of good democratic traditions, are wholeheartedly and in an overwhelming majority, on the side of the democracies. To test this sentiment one need only attend the showing of a newsreel at any of the numerous movie theaters of this capital. Whenever Roosevelt or Churchill, or Eden appear on the screen, the audience goes wild with cheers and hand-clapping. Public collections for the "Winston Churchill Fund," for the "Free France" and for the Spanish Republicans in southern France have all met with a warm and generous response.

The press, on the whole, reflects this sentiment faithfully. All the more important papers, like Diario de Costa Rica, La Tribuna, La Prensa Libre, La Hora la Razon, favor friendship with the United States, continental solidarity and all-out aid to Britain. Not all of them, it is true, are 100 per cent proof against well-paid-for Fifth Column articles which occasionally crop up here and there, but in their editorial columns, at least, they all go in for the democratic cause.

THERE IS much speculation just now about what Costa Rica ought to do should the United States become actively engaged in the war. Only the other day a leading morning daily of San Jose, Diario de Costa Rica, came out with this startling banner headline: "Immediately after the United States, Costa Rica will get into the war." This, the paper said, was the definite impression its reporters had gathered in semi-official and other well-informed circles.

A few hours later the afternoon paper, La Hora, published the results of a rapid cross-section of public opinion which were quite remarkable. Not one of the men or women of all social strata who had been questioned about the issue of war had manifested a desire that Costa Rica should stay out at all cost. All of them thought, more or less markedly, that the country should follow the United States, without hesitation, even to the extreme of a declaration of war against Hitler. The practical importance of such a measure on the part of such a small country as Costa Rica may be slight, except insofar as military and naval bases are concerned, but this popular sentiment shows, at any rate, that Hitler's work here has so far been in vain.

Choice Of Two Roads

Our Alternatives

EVER SINCE the outbreak of this conflict in September, 1939, the isolationists have been seeking to persuade the American people that the alternatives before our country are peace or war. Were this the truth today, our course as a Nation would be easy to chart. But because it is not the truth now, because the alternatives before us now go far beyond the issue of peace or war, the clamor of the isolationists is confusing the American people in one of the most critical moments of our history.

It is true that 20 months ago the principal threat to us of this war was of military involvement. But much has happened in those 20 months. From the time that Hitler's mechanized legions swept over France and seized most of the Atlantic Coast of Europe, the war became a direct threat to our national security and our independence. The passage of the lease-lend bill is proof that the majority of the American people sense that fact.

No one will deny that the maintenance of our peace is one of our most vital national interests. But every reasonable man must see that it is not so vital as our security and our independence. Peace may be lost temporarily and regained, but national security or independence, once they are lost, may never be regained.

SINCE the opening of Hitler's spring campaign, the threat of this war to our national security has been growing more acute. A year ago we feared that Germany might get Paris. Today we fear that she will get Dakar and the Cape Verde Islands, strategic bases from which she could spread the war over the South Atlantic and menace South America. It is this developing danger to the Americas, not the "machinations of international bankers," which has caused us to transform our policy from neutrality to non-belligerent support of the Allies.

Today it should be clear to all who have not hidden their heads in either the sand or the past what the real alternatives before America are. No longer only peace or war, they are now victory or surrender. These two dire alternatives, moreover, will continue to confront us until we gain the one or are forced into the other. This conclusion can be substantiated by considering our position as it is now and as it would be in the conditions that would follow a British defeat.

If we win victory in this war by giving Britain all the aid that is necessary, we will escape from those cruel alternatives within a comparatively short space of time. But we cannot escape from them if we fail to win victory in this war, for then they would continue to confront us, even though we succeeded in blocking the first Nazi drive upon this hemisphere. Our failure to defeat Germany might lead to three different situations:

FIRST, Britain might be able to obtain terms from Germany which would leave her island and part of her empire under the Union Jack but for the future overshadowed by a German-controlled Europe. Such an outcome, however, would not end our problem of defending the Americas. It would amount, in the opinion of the most qualified obseervers, only to a breathing space until Germany was ready to strike at South America. Then we would be faced actively once more with our two alternatives of victory or surrender. Then, moreover, we would not be shielded by the British Isles or the Royal Navy.

Second, despite the odds against us in man power and military resources and our unfavorable strategic position for defense of the South Atlantic against an enemy based on West Africa, we might somehow succeed in defeating attack upon the hemisphere. But that would not provide an egress from our two alternatives. Victory could not be won then by merely throwing back the enemy's assaults. If we could not carry the fight to the enemy, we could win, at best, only a truce until the next assault. And that truce would leave us confronting these same alternatives, exposed to successive ideological, economic and military attacks for as far ahead as we could look.

Third, we might lose South America to Germany, either by war or by Nazi penetration. In this case, we should be closely encircled and exposed to attack upon our cities and the Panama Canal from South American bases. The development of such a situation would presuppose that command of the Atlantic had gone to enemies who would be superior in military resources and shipbuilding capacity.

What such a situation could mean for America was indicated by the following passage from the report of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee of May 15, 1940, describing the consequences of loss of command of our oceans:

"With the loss of our outlying possessions, our foreign commerce, and subject to continual raids upon our coastal areas, our ultimate defeat is inevitable. It will be only a question of time, depending on how long our national will to further resist will hold out. Without the power to carry the fight to the enemy, there can be no alternative other than subjugation to his wishes."

Analysis of the military implications of these three situations which could follow failure in this war drives home the danger of our position. Caught as we are between the alternatives of victory or surrender, there is a clear road to victory now. But no such road is apparent if we fail to win this war.

TODAY we have available an overseas base in the British Isles from which American air power can strike at Germany's vital centers. We have no prospect of gaining such an overseas base again if we permit Britain to be defeated. Today, moreover, the British can blockade Germany in the Mediterranean Sea and Indian Ocean, as well as in the Atlantic, cutting her off from Africa, denying her the use of Mediterranean sea lanes, and limiting her access to Asia to a few inadequate land routes. Any blockade the United States could impose on a Germanized Europe in the Atlantic would be ineffective if Germany had access by sea to the raw materials of Eurasia.

Even if we could maintain alone command of the North and South Atlantic, it is difficult to see how we could take the offensive against Germany without the help and the use of the British Isles. Invasion of closely knit, hostile Europe across an ocean without bases on the other side would be impossible. Even if we could then occupy West Africa, we could not strike at Germanized Europe effectively across the great belt of the Sahara Desert. Europe, moreover, has no vulnerable Panama Canal.

All these considerations point to one conclusion. The cheapest, wisest and safest way out of the harsh alternatives we face is to win victory now. If we fail to do that, we will be held to a defensive policy, the military policy which has ended in disaster from the siege of Troy to the fall of France. Considerations of profit or even peace should not lead us to jeopardize so gravely the future of our country.

Charting The Future

THE ATMOSPHERE in Washington at the moment recalls the half hour before a bad thunderstorm on a summer day in the country. All would be passive and calm, if it were not for the rumors that fly about the city. A national emergency is to be declared. Martinique is to be seized. Martinique is not to be seized, but Dakar is. Relations with France are to be ruptured. The President is to send an important message to Congress on foreign policy. He is not to send the message, but is to make a very tough speech next Tuesday.

ALSOP

These gusts of talk are like the sudden gusts of wind in the leaves and dust flurries in the fields that foretell the coming of rain. Specifically, they may mean anything or nothing. Any or none of the specific events foretold may take place. Possibly one of them will have taken place already, before these words are printed. But generally, they mean that positive action of some sort is in preparation.

ON THE BASIS of the reports to date, it seems likely that the action will be directed more at altering the situation within the country rather than changing the course of the war. For unless the Dakar rumor is correct, which seems unlikely, none of the steps now forecast will have any but a psychological effect.

Taking the reports in order, the declaration of a national emergency will not alter the practical situation in any way. When the war began, the President declared what he called a "limited emergency" for the stated purposes of safeguarding American neutrality and promoting the national defense. The first purpose has gone with the wind. The second is sufficient to call into being any of the emergency powers lodged in his office. The Justice Department lawyers may like to draw fine distinctions. Yet if the President really wanted them to do so, they could certainly find in the declaration of limited emergency an excuse for any exercise of emergency power, from radio control to shipping control. Thus if a full emergency is declared, the real gain to be hoped from the move is showing the country where it stands.

THE TAKING of Martinique would promise the same gain, and no other. Abroad, the effect would be downright bad. In the belief of the wisest diplomats here, European opinion would accept such an action as proof of the German charge that the United States' sole interest in this war is an imperialist hankering to pick up the pieces. The French people, who look with hope to this country even at the present dark hour, when they are deceived by their leaders and about to be dragged into dangerous adventures, would lose their hopes of us. Militarily, the move would be meaningless, since Martinique is without defense and can be taken by us at any time.

Thus the project of occupying Martinique, which has undoubtedly been considered by the President even if not finally adopted, is seen to be a sort of ersatz action. The query remains, whether the President has considered an ersatz action in order to prepare the public mood for real action, or simply to satisfy those who now demand that he act without offending the opposition.

FINALLY, there is the President's speech. Mere words, however tough, obviously cannot change anything but our own public opinion at the present juncture. Changing our public opinion, describing the true facts of our situation to the people, is equally obviously a most desirable move. There is more assurance of this than of any of the other rumored developments.

It is disappointing that there seems to be no immediate prospect of real action. On the other hand, however, it must be remembered that the President rarely makes gestures for the pure pleasure of it. The moves now contemplated may be purely psychological in effect, but they must also be regarded as the prelude to other moves, of a more practical kind.

The practical moves now open to this country, in the order of their importance, are to increase the Atlantic patrol by bringing part of the Pacific fleet through the canal; to occupy the Atlantic Islands and perhaps Dakar, and to give the British active aid in the battle of the Atlantic. There are obstacles to all of them, and particularly to the last and most important. For the President not only publicly pledged himself against convoying. During the lend-lease fight he also gave private assurances to the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Senator Walter F. George, and to other Congressional leaders, that he would not take any step of the kind without recourse to Congress. As Senator George used these assurances in gaining votes for the lend-lease bill, he might well be forced into opposition if the President acted now.

KINTNER

THE RISKS of acting are very great. The trouble is that the risks of not acting are even greater. The President may diminish the risks of acting by his elaborate psychological stage-setting. But once the stage is set, the action must follow unless he cares to see the policy defeated on which he has staked his own reputation and his country's future. As that is so, the best bet is he will act, not now perhaps, but soon.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Flanders Fields—May, 1941

The voices rise from Belleau Woods,
Where none today may rest,
"France signs to fight for Germany!
Is this some cruel jest?"

The legions of heroic dead
Who fell along the Meuse,
Are restless in their graves tonight
As spreads the evil news.

From Mons, Arras and Kermel Hill,
The men who died to keep
The Germans from the Paris gates
Are tossing in their sleep.

"We gave our lives," we hear them say,
With spirits crushed and low,
"To rescue France, and now she turns
To join our ruthless foe!"

The British Tommies hear the news,
"French sign to aid the Huns,
To batter down all freedom's ways" . . .
And reach for long-lost guns.

Petain's foul pledge they hear about;
No sordid phrase they miss . . .
And 'cross the misty fields is heard,
"Did we, then, die for this?"

The mangled dead of Vimy Ridge,
And those of Cambrai, too,
Ask "What of days when faith was firm,
And hearts of men were true?"

In graveyards far along the Somme
Faint forms rise, row on row,
And voices whisper in the night,
"Can France have sunk so low?"

The men who died at Hargicourt,
At Flers and Passchendaele,
Now stir among the mists and cry,
"Did we thus win . . . yet fail?"

To Flanders field, where poppies blow,
Where Yankee doughboys sleep
In graves that seem but lately cold
The ghastly tidings leap.

"The French have joined the German hordes!" . . .
Like some fresh wound it pains;
For this they fought in winter's snows
And died in springtime rains!

The boy who came from Kansas farm,
The lad from Vermont glade,
The stripling from a Jersey shop
Gasp one harsh word, "Betrayed!"

The spectral figures move once more
And wait a zero hour,
As wiser heads speak wiser words,
And speak of faith and power.

They form and move across the fields
And into action swing,
That they may to the France they knew
The old-time courage bring.

L'ENVOI.

They sense the hand at France's throat,
And see the acts that cow.
If ever France was needing help,
They sense she needs it now!

Suggestion for a sign for France: Joan doesn't live here any more.

But heirs to estates must also dine.

France For The French

NOW THAT FRANCE has decided to stab her old ally in the back, the traitors in command of the nation have resorted to the usual device of the quitters in Europe to distract popular attention from a shameful and humiliating failure and save the national pride. Like the superrace of Germans, who told themselves that a few Jews in their midst had been the cause of their degradation, the French people are now hearing that their downfall, too, was caused by Jewishness. In Germany this meant that Jews in the ratio of 1 to 100 Germans were so far superior mentally and otherwise to the chosen people of Adolf Hitler that they were able to mesmerize them and make them do idiotic and wicked things. There were 5,000,000 Communists in Germany up to the time of Hitler, which was ten times the total Jewish population of the nation, including Jewish women and children. But, nevertheless, communism and Jewishness were held synonymous, and the 5,000,000 chosen people who had fallen into this error were said to have been dupes of a very few thousand Jewish Communists—which all totals up to a pathetic commentary on the superiority of the people of the super-race.

PEGLER

INCIDENTALLY, now that Petain, Laval and Darlan have decided that Hitler is their friend and Britain their enemy, a magnificent book-burning seems to be called for in France, with fuel taken from the writings of Herr Hitler and the German national credo as expounded by their propaganda. For Hitler and this propaganda persistently and repetitiously declared that the French were a mongrel and inferior race with a strong strain of tar in their blood stream, and that, of course, is no proper diet on which to feed the new friendship between the French people and their conquerors.

However, these observations on the moral and ethnological character of the French probably can be suppressed, now that they have served Hitler's purpose, for the same and even worse was said about the Italian people, too, but Mussolini just ignored them. The Duce, or bum of bums, even ignored out of mind the German verboten against marriages with inferior races having hooked noses and short legs—which was a very dirty crack at the little Italian King, whose proud snozzle is arched like the back of an angry tomcat, and who is so runty that he has to stand on a stepladder to scratch his own head.

BUT TO GET BACK to the subject of low morals in France and the causes of the disgrace which it is now desired to attribute to the Jews, the fact is notorious, of course, that the national capital of the country for many years enjoyed and exploited for financial gain a reputation as a city of vice and degeneracy without parallel in the modern world; that practically all of her politicians, judges and lawyers and most of her publishers were crooks, and many of them traitors; that French retail merchants in Paris could give an Armenian rug peddler lessons in gyppery; that graft was so closely woven into the national character that it finally came to have legal acceptance, and that, in the matter of parasitism the French have no equal on earth.

On this last count I hereby offer a prize of a quart of the best Scotch in town to any American who can present an authenticated case in which any Frenchman ever bought a round of drinks or a meal for any one but himself, and call attention to the fact that, though Frenchmen go around and live long in and on other countries and accept the hospitality of the people, most of them remain Frenchmen still, while Frenchmen on their home grounds never open their homes to foreigners.

This inhospitality is attributed to solicitude for the chastity of their females—which is something of which they are best able to judge for themselves—but it could be due also to a general disinclination to whip up an extra portion of what's for dinner.

AND AS TO the military defeat—which, of course, is no capsule subject and was based on reasons reaching deep into the politics and economy of France—authentic testimony may be quoted from the writings of Pierre Laval's own son-in-law, Rene de Chambrun, in his book called "I Saw France."

In this little book the protege of the man who now turns the French people over to Hitler presents a memorandum which he wrote for Gen. Weygand after the disaster. In this report he said that, while the exodus of refugees had a "depressing effect" on French soldiers, and officers, it had no effect on the British; that in important French cities a "great number of civil officials, including the mayors, did not give an example of courage and duty," but ran away, and that "the conduct of certain reserve units who fled left much to be desired," their appearance and behavior being deplorable and their morale bad. He also heard soldiers say they were sick of being killed for the 200 rich families, but said of the British that "their conduct was good."

France went through hell, no question; but she didn't have to borrow her faults from anyone. She had plenty of them, but they were all home grown.

"The Battle Of Britain Is Ours," Hillman Tells N. Y. Meeting

By International News Service

New York, May 21.—In vigorously pleading for more speed in defense production, Sidney Hillman, co-director of the Office of Production Management, tonight said "the Battle of Britain is ours," and if Hitler conquers Europe, New York will be in danger of becoming a "second London."

"We cannot wait until our whole seacoast becomes a line of flaming cities," he told the National Industrial Conference Board at its annual meeting.

Every segment of the Nation, all industries, employers and employes must cooperate closely in speeding aid to Britain, for "democracy now faces its hour of decision," Hillman pleaded. He said:

"We cannot, we must not slow down the pace of our support to Britain. We dare not run the risk of being left alone in a hostile world to face a showdown struggle between two ways of life. The conflict between totalitarianism and democracy is ours."

It is imperative that differences between management and labor be not exaggerated he said. Genuine cooperation demands an end to fault-finding, Hillman went on. He said that employers should take labor spokesmen into their councils, and that in this policy "first of all is a whole-hearted acceptance of labor's right to bargain collectively through representatives of its own choosing."

"Second," he said, "we must have wage scales that bear a just relationship to the earning power of industry and assure a fair standard of living.

"Third, we must have the kind of work week that will serve to enlarge the opportunity for employment to those who are still without jobs, and will prevent the many industrial accidents, delays and decreases in output that characterize the overtired worker.

"Fourth, proper physical working conditions must be maintained within the plant itself.

Britain's New Planes Given U. S. Names

New York, May 21—(AP).—Names with a familiar New World ring—such as Boston, Buffalo and Mohawk—have been applied by the British to most of the American-made military planes they have put into service or have on order.

By contrast, the United States armed services designate warplane types with a stark brevity of figures and letters.

In the last fortnight press dispatches have referred to flights of Havocs, twin-engine medium bombers made in Santa Monica, Calif. Almost since the start of the European war planes which the British call Hudsons periodically have popped into the news.

The Havoc is a type turned out by the Douglas Aircraft Co., known to the U. S. Army Air Corps as the A-20, it is designated by the company as the DB-7. The Hudson, a twin-engine bomber and patrol plane, is made by the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation of Burbank, Calif. It has no counterpart in the United States armed services, but a similar design was used as the basis for one high-altitude laboratory machine for the Air Corps.

R. A. F. Uses Navy Plane

In the following list, similar types used or ordered by the U. S. Army or Navy would not necessarily be confined to land or sea operations in the service of the British. Brewster fighters, for instance, used by the American Navy for carrier operation, lately have been reported in use by the Royal Air Force.

The name of the manufacturer is followed by the designation, a description and the name the British have given the type. Army types arbitrarily are listed under "Royal Air Force," navy types under "Coastal Command-Fleet Air Arm." Where no U. S. Army or Navy designation is available, that of the manufacturer is supplied.

Bell P-39, single-engine interceptor-fighter—Caribou. (The manufacturer calls it the Airacobra. The Allison in-line liquid-cooled engine is submerged in the fuselage behind the pilot. The P-38, P-39 and P-40 are the only American-made planes currently using in-line liquid-cools.)

Consolidated B-24, four-engine heavy, long-range bomber—Liberator.

Bomber Called Maryland

Curtiss P-36, single-engine fighter—Mohawk.

Curtiss P-40, fighter, single Allison engine—Tomahawk.

Curtiss P-46, single-engine fighter—Kittihawk.

Douglas A-20, twin-engine medium bomber—Boston. This is the Boston 1. Modifications, involving horsepower, armament, etc., are named Boston 3 and Havoc.

Douglas B-18, twin-engine medium bomber—Digby.

Lockheed P-38, interceptor-fighter, two Allison engines—Lightning.

Lockheed Vega 37 (manufacturer's designation), twin-engine bomber—Ventura.

Lockheed EB-14 (manufacturer's designation), twin-engine landplane used for both bombing and patrol work—Hudson. This type has been delivered in quantity to the coastal command.

Martin 167-B4 (manufacturer's designation), twin-engine medium bomber—Maryland.

Martin 187 (manufacturer's designation), type unknown—Baltimore.

North American NA-73 manufacturer's designation), single-engine fighter—Mustang.

Yale and Harvard, Too

North America BC-1, basic combat plane used for training—Harvard. An improved version known as the BC-1A is called the Harvard 2.

North American BT-14, trainer—Yale.

Vultee 72 (manufacturer's designation), single-engine fighter—Vengeance.

Coastal Command—Fleet Air Arm

Brewster F2A-2, single-engine fighter—Buffalo.

Brewster SBA-1, single-engine scout-dive bomber—Bermuda.

Curtiss SBC-4, single-engine scout-dive bomber, a biplane—Cleveland. It is more familiarly known in the Navy as the "helldiver."

Grumman F4F-3, single-engine fighter—Martlet.

Vought SB2U-2, sea-or-land-plane scout bomber, can be equipped with torpedo rack—Chesapeake.

A new name does not necessarily mean a new type as pointed out, the Army's A-20, designated by the manufacturer as the DB-7 and by the British as the Boston, becomes the Havoc when equipped for night fighting.

Britain Wars On Food Prices

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, May 21.—Launching a drive to stamp out food profiteering by speculators who take advantage of war time shortages to force the prices upward, Lord Woolton, minister of food, has ordered a "flying squad" of food inspectors to seek out the racketeers. Some of those inspectors are former Scotland Yard detectives.

Strong criticism has recently cropped up about sky-rocketing prices in many food lines and at lags in price control in general. Lady Violet Bonham Carter, speaking at a woman's liberal party meeting in Leeds, said that a can of English produced pickled cabbage which last December sold at 8 pence, has now gone to 2 shillings, 3½ pence. She assailed the rise as "unscrupulous."

Lord Woolton followed his formation of the food price detective squad by promising an early parliamentary statement on the results of the food price investigation.

Some wholesalers, it is asserted, seek to corner goods of which there are shortages and then force tradesmen to buy heavy stocks to foods they do not want in order to get small quantities of the wanted articles.

Magazine Backs U.S. Foreign Policy

Philadelphia, May 21 (U.P.).—The Saturday Evening Post, which previously has followed an isolationist policy, in an editorial this week gives its support to the Administration in the "American crusade" against totalitarianism.

"Everything we said on the losing side we still believe," an editorial for the May 24 issue said, "but it is the reality we accept."

The editorial says "the American Government has proclaimed that Hitler must be destroyed. It has solemnly pledged itself before the world to employ its total rsources to bring that result to pass.

"To speak of this as national defense is absurd. It is the American crusade."

A. F. L. Men Defy Shipyard Pickets

By the Associated Press

A. F. of L. shipyard workers marched back to their jobs through picket lines of union machinists yesterday after the strikers had rejected a plea of Gov. Culbert L. Olson that they return to work in 11 shipyards in the San Francisco Bay area.

However, shipyard operators could not say how long they could operate without machinists, none of whom were in the back-to-work movement.

In Washington, the Senate committee investigating defense progress, headed by Senator Truman, of Missouri, immediately took steps to inquire into the tie-up. Charles P. Clark, committee counsel, said he was attempting to reach union leaders and heads of the shipbuilding industry to arrange a hearing Friday.

John Frey, head of the A. F. of L. Metal Trades Council, led a group of 500 men into the Moore shipyard in Oakland, saying defiantly, "God help the man who tries to stop me." Frey and other A. F. of L. leaders have termed the strike unauthorized.

Smaller groups went back to work in other plants. A thousand or more pickets made no attempt to stop them, and no disorder was reported at any of the yards.

The machinists, members of both the A. F. of L. and C. I. O., are asking wage increases from a new contract scale of $1.12 to $1.15 an hour and double time for overtime.

The 11 yards, closed for 12 days, have $500,000,000 of defense orders.

Negotiations between Southern bituminous coal operators and the C. I. O. United Mine Workers were broken off in New York after the operators, in a series of newspaper advertisements, had assailed John L. Lewis, the miners' president, as a man who would become "dictator of the country." K. C. Adams, Lewis' official spokesman, countered that the Southern owners were "mock patriots."

The dispute over a new two-year wage contract now goes to the Defense Mediation Board in Washington. The Southern operators have rejected union demands which include pay raises to $7 a day from the present Southern scale of $5.60. The Northern owners in the eight-State Appalachian area have agreed to a $1-a-day boost from $6 a day.

The second strike in two weeks tied up construction of the government's $30,000,000 shell loading plant near Ravenna, Ohio. Between 5,000 and 7,000 A. F. of L. laborers walked out, demanding wage increases of 25 cents an hour from the present average of 65 cents.

A. F. L. carpenters struck against the same job for eight hours about two weeks ago, but returned to work under pay boosts to $1.37½ cents an hour from $1.12½.

From Buffalo came word that members of the A. F. of L. International Longshoremen's Union had stopped work at two Great Lakes package freight lines after rejecting a wage increase negotiated by a Federal arbitrator. Company officials, calling the stoppage illegal, said the companies and the union had agreed to accept the award of the Federal official, calling for wage increase of 7½ cents an hour, to 87½ cents for Longshoremen, boatmen, extra warehouse checkers and dock clerks. Union officials said the workers were not satisfied with the award and were asking raises of 15 cents an hour.

A week-old strike of C. I. O. United Auto Workers against the Hudson Motor Co. was settled in Detroit. The 8,500 employes involved ratified an agreement, announced earlier by James F. Dewey, Federal conciliator, which calls for wage increases of 8 cents an hour. The company has not announced its present wage rates, but union officials have said the minimum scale was 75 cents an hour and the hiring rate 60 cents.

'Demagogue' Debate Brings HOUSE Down

The question of who is a demagogue came up in the House yesterday and it was settled by Speaker Rayburn with the help of a dictionary. House members laughed when the speaker read from a desk-size Webster's:

"Demagogue—1. A leader or orator popular with or identified with the people."

House members laughed again when Rayburn observed that this definition of the word is considered "obsolete and chiefly historical." The speaker resumed reading:

"2. One skilled in arousing the prejudices and passions of the populace by rhetoric, sensational charges, specious arguments . . ."

The question arose because Representative Clare Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, sought to make a question of personal privilege a Washington newspaper editorial attacking House debate May 12 on the District fiscal relations formula proposed by Senator Overton. The editorial was entitled "Demagogues at Work."

When the Speaker observed that there was nothing in the editorial "that refers to the gentleman from Michigan," Hoffman asked privilege of the House for a resolution calling for an investigation of the editorial by a special committee of five members.

On that Speaker Rayburn deferred final decision until today.

Indianhead Job Still Shut Down

Work on 650 prefabricated houses on a project near the United States naval powder factory at Indianhead, Md., was still at a standstill yesterday as the Federal Works Agency continued its efforts to negotiate settlement of a C. I. O.-A. F. of L. jurisdictional dispute which caused the walkout of 484 workers.

Ray C. Kirkpatrick, assistant on labor relations for the FWA who is negotiating the case, said the status of the strike was unchanged. A. F. of L. workmen walked out Monday after 1 of 11 contractors on the housing project hired C. I. O. workmen.

The walkout involves jurisdiction and not wages or hours, Public Buildings Administration officials said.

Henderson Asks No New Price Laws

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Contrary to expectations, Government Price Administrator Leon Henderson told President Roosevelt yesterday that there is no immediate need for legislation giving his office additional direct price pegging enforcement powers, it was learned on good authority.

Henderson, who paid a White House call with David Ginsburg, Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply general counsel, and Wayne Coy, OEM director, is believed also to have indicated to Mr. Roosevelt that there is no need at this time for a general order freezing all prices at their present levels.

Instead, he is reported to have discussed four principal price problems now confronting OPACS; speculative activity which has driven up the cost of a few individual commodities, higher levels of imported items, a run-away movement in cotton textiles, and the threat of higher prices under attempts to achieve farm parity levels.

Henderson is known to feel that as long as the general level of all prices remains fairly stationary, a general price freezing order is not necessary and that individual commodities which soar out of line can be better handled by specific industry conferences and price fixing action.

No Uniform Upward Trend

Although a large school of economists and defense experts, whose chief exponent is Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the former War Industries Board, has urged immediate general price freezing, Henderson feels his organization is not large enough to adjust all the hardships and discrepancies which would result from such action and that without adjustment the resultant inflexibility would be undesirable.

He has warned, however, that if the general price level for all commodities starts an upward drive, he will not hesitate to freeze all prices, regardless of the hardships. To date, however, OPACS has seen no evidence of such a uniform upward movement.

Additional legislative authority, Henderson is said to believe, would be necessary only if he is unable to enforce OPACS orders. At present, however, compliance is general, and OPACS feels that failure to obey its prices regulations will come, it at all, only from the group termed by Gen. Johnson in NRA days as the "chiseling fringe."

To curb speculative price increases and increased cost of foreign goods which have risen to levels not justified by higher transportation charges, Henderson is planning a series of conferences with commodity exchange officials, it was learned.

Cotton Yarn to Be Cut

Prices of processed agricultural items, which are being watched closely, will be allowed to rise only to levels which reflect the rise of the basic farm commodity, according to present OPACS plans.

This policy will also apply to cotton yarn, where a current price of 52 cents a pound will be reduced to 40 cents, with a maximum of 2 cents additional allowed provided the price of cotton is pegged higher by legislative action.

WPA Plans to Reduce Rolls 500,000 by July 1, House Told

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

The Work Projects Administration plans to reduce its rolls by nearly 500,000 workers in the next two months, a House Appropriations subcommittee was informed yesterday.

Howard Hunter, acting WPA commissioner, was reported to have told legislators handling the 1942 relief appropriation that, if President Roosevelt's estimated are approved, the number of WPA workers will have dropped to 1,000,000 almost immediately after the new fiscal year begins July 1. About 1,470,000 persons are now employed by WPA.

President Roosevelt, in requesting Congress to allot the WPA $886,000,000 for the fiscal year 1942, said the amount would provide relief for a monthly average of 1,000,000 persons, but Hunter's testimony was the first indication that that figure, lowest in WPA history, might be reached in July and would then be maintained throughout the year.

Hearings to End Soon

Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, acting chairman of the relief appropriations subcommittee, said last night he expected hearings on the WPA estimates to be concluded this week and that legislation might be reported to the House by the end of next week.

The Virginian, a leader of the House economy bloc, said he was not certain whether the President's estimate represents the maximum possible reduction in relief appropriations. The figure proposed by Mr. Roosevelt is $109,000,000 under his January budget estimate and $464,000,000 below the WPA outlay for the current year.

Representative Ludlow (Democrat), of Indiana, said $886,000,000 is "certainly high enough" and that further paring of the WPA expenditures might be possible.

Republican members of the subcommittee indicated they will demand a sharp reduction of the President's estimate.

Can't See Reason

"I can't understand why this large appropriation should be necessary in view of the extraordinary increase in industrial activity and employment," said Representative Ditter (Republican), of Pennsylvania.

Woodrum expressed frank opposition to the President's suggestion that the WPA drop its present regulation forbidding continuous employment of any person for more than 18 months, a rule imposed by Congress two years ago. He also said he opposes relaxation of the present provision barring aliens from WPA employment, another change in the relief law recommended by Mr. Roosevelt.

Representative Johnson (Democrat), of West Virginia, said he expected the committee to turn down the President's request for abolition of the 18-month rule, but indicated he will support the appropriation asked by the Administration.

"It's about as little as the WPA could get along on," he said.

and keep it until you give me that money back."

So Grandfather Williams took the bicycle and Buck went out to rob somebody of $17.

Last Thursday he climbed

through a service station window and took $17.40, but Sheriff James Lillard of Rappahannock County caught him before he could turn it over to his grandfather and get back the bicycle. The boy was haled into court. The judge placed him on probation.

Still Buck didn't have the $17, so last night he set out to rob the log cabin postoffice-grocery-home of Edward Johnson, 45, and his postmistress wife, Sadie, 46, at Huntly, Va., 8 miles south of Front Royal on the Culpeper Road.

"I didn't plan to shoot them," Buck told the newspaperman. "I don't know why I did. Yes, I'm sorry."

He walked into the Johnson store about 8 p. m. and ordered some ice cream and soda pop. He ate them and paid Mr. Johnson, who was behind the counter, looking at a mail order catalogue.

Mrs. Johnson sat in a wicker chair, reading a magazine. In the living room, adjacent to the store-postoffice, sat the Johnsons' daughter, Ethel, freshman at the Washington (Va.) High School, studying her lessons and listening to the radio.

Suddenly Buck whipped out a .38 revolver, pointed it at Mr. Johnson's head and pulled the trigger twice. One bullet struck the storekeeper above the left eye, and he slumped to the counter, his head spilling blood on the mail order catalouge. The second bullet entered his shoulder, and he fell flat on the floor behind the counter, dead.

Boy Pursues Girl

Before Mrs. Johnson could rise from her chair, Buck had wheeled about and fired twice again, this time at her. One bullet found its mark above her right eye, leaving powder marks. The other struck her shoulder. She fell from the chair, dead, the magazine beside her.

Ethel by then had jumped up and run to the door connecting the living room with the store. Buck saw her and pointed his pistol, which now contained only one bullet, at her.

She fled back into the living room, the boy in pursuit. She found herself trapped in the corner by the radio. The boy pointed his pistol and fired. The bullet tore her throat and jaw and she slumped to the floor, dead.

On the chair beside her body were her textbooks, one of which was titled, "The Story of Civilization."

Buck Cameron returned to the other room and pulled open the cash drawer. Nothing was in it except a few coins. He departed without touching them.

Bicycle Stolen, Sheriff Says

The boy had come to Huntly on a bicycle, which Sheriff Lillard said had been stolen from a Front Royal store, but Buck maintains that he borrowed it from a friend.

After the slayings, Buck put the bicycle in the ditch beside the road and flagged a ride to the top of the mountain with William C. Williams, Front Royal small loan man, and his friend, J. E. Dix.

On top of the mountain he thanked them and got out at the road leading to the Chester Gap orchards, walked up it the remaining mile to his backwoods cabin home and went to bed after reloading his pistol and hiding it in the bushes outside.

It was about 8:30 or 9 p. m. when Mrs. Edna Moore, 22, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, drove up to the postoffice with her husband, William A. Moore, jr., 26, electrician's assistant at the Viscose plant in Front Royal, for a chat with the family.

Wife Screams in Horror

Mrs. Moore went in as her husband started to put gasoline into the car. Moore was startled by a scream of horror from his wife. He ran into the log cabin, and together they gazed on the bodies of Mrs. Moore's mother, father and only sister.

Soon, Sheriff Lillard, Virginia State police, a Federal Bureau of Investigation agent, two postoffice inspectors, Commonwealth's Attorney W. F. Moffett, newspapermen and a large crowd of mountain folk were on the scene.

Bill Williams came back and told of riding Buck Cameron up the mountain an hour previously. As the Commonwealth's attorney and sheriff left with State Police Sergt. Charles W. Blue and Trooper O. H. Mason to arrest young Cameron at his home, word of the tragedy spread through the hills like a forest fire.

Talk of Lynching

Groups of mountain folk talked of lynching. Not that they weren't accustomed to shooting scrapes. Their code of behavior allowed a man to break the law under certain circumstances. But this cold-blooded murder was a different matter to them than a family feud or a sheep theft. The Johnsons were among the most highly respected people in the section and tempers were aroused.

However, the authorities did not return to the postoffice with Buck Cameron. After finding him in his bed, two .22 rifles and a shotgun beside him, they whisked the boy away to a secret place of safekeeping.

Today, newspapermen were allowed to interview him at the State Police's Second Division headquarters near Culpeper.

Looks Like a 10-Year-Old

Dressed in overalls, a brown hunting cap and brown shirt, the slight, angelic-looking boy smiled and posed willingly for pictures. He does not look his age. He seems more like a 10-year-old.

In a childlike voice he boasted of his marksmanship—told of shooting deer, fox, coon, rabbit and squirrel on the mountain top.

"But," he added, "I didn't plan to shoot those people."

At the Camerons' cabin, the boy's father, George Dewey Cameron, squatted in the front yard and told how Buck had always been a good boy until recently.

The first indication of waywardness came shortly after last Christmas, when he refused to go back to school. Then, two months ago, his father said, he kept $10 which had been given him to buy groceries and charged the merchandise, instead.

Had a Good Home Life

"But I told him he'd have to buck up and be a little man," said the elder Cameron. "I guess he didn't pay me no heed."

The boy had a good home life, despite the fact that his parents were separated 12 years ago and he had been brought up mostly by his step-mother, said the father, who works at the Chester Gap orchards. He visited his mother frequently.

"I don't know what could have got into him," said Cameron.

Some say that the boy didn't see much difference in shooting coons, foxes, and squirrels and shooting people.

A preliminary hearing on three charges of first-degree murder has been set tentatively for Saturday morning in the trial justice court at Washington, Va.

West Point Keeps in Step

Honor System Is Treasured Tradition of Military Academy

By Bill Boni

West Point, N. Y., May 21.—Ask the average man today what he thinks of the United States Naval Academy and the United States Military Academy and the chances are that he'll reply with a question:

"Why hasn't the Army speeded up graduation the way the Navy has?"

What he means is that the Naval Academy now is compressing what used to be a four-year course into three and a half years. At West Point, a cadet still is graduated four years after he enters, and academy authorities are going to do everything they can to keep that system as it is today.

Primarily, there is no need for West Point to turn out new officers at a speed-up rate. The Navy needs officers to man the new two-ocean warships that are sliding down the ways. But the Navy must draw those officers almost exclusively from Annapolis.

The Army also needs new officers, but the Army can get those officers from a vast reserve pool that has been built up steadily since the World War.

At that time Reserve Officers Training Corps (R. O. T. C.) were installed in many of the country's largest colleges and universities. Today the United States has more than 100,000 reserve officers available, and will have some 8,000 more next month, when the newest crop is graduated.

To a West Point man, few memories are more painful than the recollection of the upheaval caused at the academy during the World War and the narrow margin by which traditions were preserved that had been built up since the academy's founding in 1802, upon the recommendation of George Washington.

In order to supply the rapidly expanding U. S. Army with enough officers, West Point's class of 1917 was sent out 2 months ahead of time, the class of 1918 9 months early, 1919 a full year, 1920 2 years and 1921 about 32 months ahead of schedule.

As a result, the corps of cadets on November 2, 1918, consisted of the plebe class which had entered in July. To quote from "The United States Military Academy and Its Foreign Contemporaries," by Lieut. Col. Herman Beukema:

"They had been at the academy but four and a half months when they had to shoulder the responsibility of maintaining the traditions that had been handed down over 100 years. West Point, for the time being, had ceased to be an educational institution; it had become a training camp."

To add to the confusion, the War Department ordered a new fourth class to report to the academy, which thereupon had two sets of Plebes and no upperclassmen, and then ordered one of the two most recently graduated classes to return to the academy for six months' additional training.

The original Plebes were uniformed in regulation cadet grey; the "new" Plebes, lacking such uniforms, wore the olive drab of enlisted men, and the returned graduates, uniformed as officers, were regarded as such by the cadets, but regarded as cadets by the officers.

The traditions were reestablished on a sound footing and the academy—to borrow a phrase from the rival service—was restored to an even keel. But it was a near-miss, and no one at, or connected with, West Point would like to see it happen again.

Chief step in carrying on the traditions was the decision of the superintendent, Brig. Gen. Douglas MacArthur, to have the officer-instructors move into the barracks with the cadets.

Most famous of the West Point traditions is the honor system. Not actually a system in the accepted sense of the word, it is so well-grounded that an instructor knows a cadet will not lie, will report himself even for an unintentional violation of the honor code and, although the academy's educational system is competitive and the man finishing near the top of his class will stand a much better chance of promotion, will not take advantage of his classmates because by doing so he not only would be putting himself ahead but would be putting others back.

Bill Cunningham's Column: Baer-Louis Bout Proves Good Old Ring Days Are Gone

By Bill Cunningham

Admiral Edward Earle, ranking commodore of the Mason Street Yacht Club; Mr. W. A. (Butch) Hamilton, pugilistic pundit of such staggering historical experience that he's popularly believed to have had a piece of Abel when the latter lost to Cain, and your correspondent were idly swapping reminiscences the other midnight when the admiral flung a chance remark that landed across the face like a towel soaked in ammonia. He was recalling the hot, high hours of the last international yacht race off newport, when Mr. Vanderbilt and Mr. Sopwith were alternately breaking out their spinnakers and running up their squawk flags.

An army of famous newspaper and magazine authors sat shoulder to shoulder in that vast press loft each night rattling those typewriters like battalions of machine guns. "Of course," he said, "we'll never see it again. That was 1930—the last year of the world as it used to be!"

That's right. The great Wall Street crash was in the fall of '29. Those last great yacht races just got under the wire. Then came the debacle. There went the titantic twenties. Here came hard times. Gradually came war—in other far places first, but slowly closer, closer and now look where it is.

The pugilistic picture is only a few minor threads in the great general tapestry, but it's a part of the whole, and it's shrivelled with the rest to great degree. Here comes summer, and where is the great ball yard opera of yore? That's not Mike Jacobs, but an echo that's answering. Imagine trying to put a performing vocabulary over the seven bar hurdles in honor of Louis vs. Buddy Baer, and then Louis vs. Bill Conn!

Jacobs Cleans Shelves

Maybe Michael Jacobs senses what he's up against: ". . . the world as it used to be." Washington is luckier than most metropoli which have been favored with a Louis lulu. At least their victim, Buddy Baer, has a name somebody's heard before and a size that will provide some spectacular falling if it goes.

But I doubt if Uncle

MIKE JACOBS

Michael, in his heart, an organ that has been variously described as being as big as a house and so small that it would take an Army sharpshooter to hit it at 15 yards with a shotgun, really wants Louis vs. Conn as a New York extravaganza. Twenty-dollar tops plus tax calls with the public for two bulls of even size and some almighty hitting. Louis versus the pliable Pittsburgher is largely a clinic upon the subject of whether a butcher can brain a butterfly with a baseball bat.

Tex Rickard used to figure all his problems on his cuff. Mike apparently uses the space north of his china teeth, but however he gets it, he's probably smart enough to see that this may be his last crack for a while, maybe for a long while, at monopolizing boxers. Neither State commissions nor rival promoters have been able to break his hold. Uncle Sam now may do it and automatically. The Army, Navy and Marine Corps had 'em in the last war. The civilian division went completely out of focus. Maybe Mike plans to use the stock on hand and more or less clean the shelves pending future developments.

Case For Coroner

Louis and the younger, bigger, but far less volatile of the Baers, go in under the chandeliers in the Washington ball park tomorrow night. Unless Louis has slipped like a cat on a greased pole, it ought to be a case for the coroner and next of kin fairly early in the fray. The bigger of the Baers packs far the smaller guns.

Buddy qualified for Friday night's bombing by stopping the antiquated Beer Barrel Poker, Tony Galento, with a seven-round technical knockout last month. There seemed to be quite a question before the house at the time as to whether Buddy stopped the bulbous old Baron of Bazoo, or whether The Baron stopped himself. Tony claimed his left hand was hurt. Most of the experts thought the trouble lay closer to his spine. A wild raspberry as he ordered the gloves cut off him after the close of the sixth and said he was on his way to see a doctor.

There's always the chance that Louis has slipped. He's due to go one of these nights. Some of the boys swear they see signs. But the preponderant chances are that that's not what Baer's going to see. His final view of the evening probably will be the snaky turn of a yellow elbow, a blinding flash of white light, a grand total of 8,500 fans who'd divorced themselves nisi from 25,000 smackers to view this clownish carnival rewarded the refugee from the Jersey flats with raucous wreaths of night-blooming the crazy whirl of an Aurora Borealis gone mad, then a sudden clearing, and the little red school house on the hill. But that's what some men take for dough.

Light Colors, Sheer Weaves Feature Summer Hose

Nylon hose, the most talked-of hosiery this year, are shown at left in a summer version, sheer, two-thread, in Yucatan, a vibrant shade for white or pastels. Suitable for all occasions, they are especially adapted for these dressier type summer shoes.

Mesh Stockings Gain in Favor New Black Nylons Also Popular

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor

NOT SINCE stockings first came into existence, in the days of Henry VIII's court, have they caused as much furor among women (and men) as in the last year. With the advent of nylon hosiery, women have become more and more hose conscious.

Unintentionally, nylon hose have set the trend for lighter, softer shades in all types of summer hosiery—silk and cotton. The nylons have a tendency to lighten in color after the first few washings, thus setting the color pace for all hose. The light color is probably due to the fact that women have been making a game of buying one pair and washing them each night—just to see how long they would wear.

Regardless of where the vogue for lighter hose sprang from, it has made a hit with women. These softer beige shades are a relief from the vivid coppery colors of last Summer. They range from the pure natural tones of beige to those of nude and a slight pinkish cast. They bear homey, nostalgic names typical of the Americas—country club, rodeo, paprika, Yucatan and others.

Mesh Weaves in Vogue

With the savory rosy-light beiges, it is suggested that greens, blues, pastels and white should be worn. With the wheat-like or piquant suntan shades, all the vibrant summer combinations are possible. The brown to beige costumes and black and white outfits are also worn with these suntan shades.

The newest of the fashions revived for summer hosiery are the attractive mesh weaves. These range all the way from the tiny lock stitch variety to those of the non-run type. Obviously the latter has gained a wide appeal. The vertical meshes are doubtless the most flattering fashion. But all the new meshes are more sheer so that even the wide ones do not have a tendency to make legs appear larger.

For sports wear and tailored suits or frocks, meshes are especially appropriate. The wide open types are, paradoxically, being suggested now for both sports and dancing. Experts agree, however, that the large meshes are not as popular this season as the small or medium sizes.

Those with a fastidious love for fanciful hosiery will have a yen for the novelties shown this summer. For open toed shoes there are hose with delicate pastel flowers painted on the toes. With both open toe and heel shoes hose with lace toes and heels might be worn. There are also hand painted clocks on nylon hose.

Blacks Popular

The most unusual stockings shown are the very sheer black nylons. Believe it or not, the very sheer ones have a tendency to make the legs look white. They are very much in vogue for dressy afternoon or formal evening occasions.

Within the last few years great strides have been made in the manufacturing of hosiery, which is now considered to be "the most important third of a woman's costume."

Whether a woman is the type that is "hard on stockings" or just gives them mild wear, her cooperation is needed. When she buys hose she should be sure that they fit. Experts say most women buy their hose too small. It is also estimated that 72 per cent of women do not know what brands they are wearing.

When buying your next pair of hose take these items into consideration:

To relieve stress and strain, buy with lastex knitted in above the knees.

Better grade or highly-twisted hosiery are more resistant to runs and snags.

Hose are made in lengths proportioned to fit foot and leg length.

New Summer Furniture Built For Comfort and Hospitality

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

THERE ARE, we suppose, some esthetic souls who really enjoy nature undiluted, but personally we must have our hours in the sun well cushioned, if not downright luxurious. And so this season's new summer furniture is right down our alley.

Flowered duck with delicious big roses for its pattern is fresh and charming in the summer scene—it's shown for chair backs and umbrella lining on one of our favorite sets of metal furniture.

Another important novelty in summer furniture is a rattan bra that will solve the problem of summer company. A number of enormous hassocks, some of them sectional, provide extra seating yet break the monotony of too many chairs. A corner table, genial for porch buffet teas and such like, is of cane with a top of either formica or wood. A corner sofa is also pretty nice for porch or terrace. A backgammon table of cane with an extra cover top is a useful idea.

Plant stands and flower pots, bird cages and serving wagons are available in both metal and cane to harmonize with other outdoor furnishings. Outdoor lighting units, also of either metal or cane, can be had with electrical wiring for candles.

There are several "conversation pieces" made with two chairs joined by a table between them, also in either cane or metal. "Cemetery benches," those intricately patterned iron benches that look so gay and so graceful and so Southern, are still in style for gardens, as is other lacey iron furniture.

Lots of summer furniture is expensive—but don't be discouraged by the first price tag you meet. Most of the stores also make a point to include some excellent specials in Chinese peel chairs, in willow chairs and in metal table and chair sets that are reasonably priced. These may not impress you so much in the store, but when you get them home, away from comparison with the higher-priced things, they look quite nice.

Count Calories To Reduce

Dismay — as Mrs. Hefty endeavors to squeeze her "too, too solid flesh" into an already crowded front seat!

You're always so unhappily conscious of your size when you're fat. But on a delicious low-calory diet you could quickly be light and slender again—lose 20 pounds in 10 weeks.

How does this diet work? By taking less of the high-calory foods that make fat, by eating more low-calory ones, you cut to 1,200 calories a day. That's fewer than normal, so you start "burning up" your surplus pounds.

The "innocent" breakfast you ate today may have been dynamite! Two waffles, two pats of butter have 600 calories. Then pour on 200 calories worth of honey, start your meal with five stewed prunes at 50 each and you have 1,050 calories.

But here's a delicious breakfast you can eat while slimming: 1 cup tomato juice (50), 2 scrambled eggs (160), 2 slices of Melba toast with butter (100)—in all a modest 310!

With a calory chart, easy to avoid bulge-makers like baked sweet potatoes (200 each), Brown Betty (500 a cup). You choose baked white potato (100), apple snow (125).

Lighter Woods For Cedar Chests

Light woods are dominating the cedar chest market. Harvest and Honduras mahogany, champagne maple and limed oak are being featured in all the modernized chests. Harvest is a warm, ripe-wheat color—Honduras a cool beige. Champagne maple is a light, warm blonde shade and limed oak finishes are either warm beige or light, cool gray in tone.

Peasant motif pressed carving, pencil stripes and brushed brass are preferred decorative notes for these chests.

Straight-line bases and tops and oversized ball feet are another definitely new note.

Hardware is hidden on all the chests styled in the modern trend.

Copies of eighteenth century chests, in both regular and harvest mahogany, have bowed fronts.

Girl, 19, Asks How to Get Date With Musician She Loves From a Distance; He Is Well Mannered But He Drinks and She Hopes to Reform Him

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 19, very much in love with a boy of 20, who has never asked me for a date, but whose actions indicate that he likes me very much. Some time ago he got into the habit of drinking, and I am sure the reason he doesn't ask me for dates is because he knows I wouldn't stand for a boy getting drunk in my company. Also, he works at night—playing in an orchestra—and I never see him except when I have another date.

He is a very nice boy, from a fine family and has grand manners and a clean mind—by which I mean he never makes suggestive or embarrassing remarks. He lives away from home, staying with a crowd of boys who are older than he. I feel sure that if I could get a date with him, I could keep him from drinking so much—because his manner implies that he thinks a great deal of my opinion, and he is too much of a gentleman to get nasty if I tried to keep him sober. Please advise me how to go about getting a date with him. Sincerely,
PRUE.

DEAR PRUE: You are a silly girl, pining for a chance to flirt with deviltry—and I see no point in conspiring to help you get a date with this hard-drinking youngster. In so doing, I would be merely aiding and abetting you in making something of a fool of yourself over a chap whose professional blandishments you have mistakenly construed as having personal significance; a chap, in other words, who is only casually aware of your existence, and who probably considers it part of his business to ogle and flatter, in a patronizing way, those young ladies who frequent his place of employment and strain for crumbs of his (and his fellow musicians') attention.

You say you are "very much in love with him." That is nonsense. You are infatuated with him; or, rather, with his glamour boy aura. I suppose you think of him as a Man of Mystery; perhaps with a Secret Sorrow in his life, who drinks to forget it; and who could be reclaimed, maybe, if you were to bring wholesome happiness into his life and convince him that you believe him to be, fundamentally, worthy of your love—so that he would be inspired to reform for your sake. More nonsense. You may depend upon it that he isn't making any sacrifices on the altar of nobility, or abstract principle. You may be sure that whatever feminine companionship he really wants, he goes after; and what is under his nose, that he doesn't reach for, just doesn't interest him.

Swashbuckling drunks in Victorian novels may have chivalrously abstained from the society of angel-browed women—but inebriates in modern real life don't. Men who drink are both weak and selfish enough, as a rule, to believe in satisfying their own appetites, of every kind, in bland disregard of ethic and scruple. They aren't sufficiently mature or stable to take concern for the rights and feelings of others—and the ministrations of would-be reformers are, for the most part, anathema to them. So my advice to you is to stay strictly on your own side of the fence, in this encounter, and leave the musician to his own devices, and to the company of his chosen kind.

Amateur Psychologist Advises College Man

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a college student, with an amateur's interest in psychology, and if I may be so presumptuous, I would like to take issue with your answer (of May 17) to the 20-year-old college man who can't get into the swing of campus life. For one thing, I think you must have scared him to death. I doubt the wisdom of sowing in the fellow's already hysterically hypochondriacal mind the additional fear of "emotional inversion."

You suggest psychoanalysis as the best method of getting at the bottom of his emotional imbalance and curing it. If he takes that advice, I should like to see him consult a psychiatrist who does not feel compelled to instruct him in all the morbid possibilities of his neurotic state. Dr. Henry C. Link is much opposed to fulsome revelation of psychiatric theory to a patient. And William Lyon Phelps, when in Washington last winter, voiced a similar view when he said "Unhappiness can never be rationalized away; but it can be diverted."

But to cut out the pedantry. I would like to see the fellow do the following: Go to church regularly and get really acquainted with his pastor. Choose a sport (preferably golf or swimming) and stick to it until he is sufficiently skilled to present formidable competition. Develop a 15-inch bicep—so that he can experience the kick of knowing he could be a tough guy in a tussle. Go away to school—if his parents are dictatorial or unreasonable. In any event, change schools or go into the Army for a year, as a means of getting new perspective on life in general. College society is more difficult than any other form of society, I believe, and he is probably more handicapped in making the grade, socially, there, than he would in any other environment.

He ought to "unfreeze;" stop putting on a show; turn his efforts from "seeming," into "being" the real thing. He ought to realize that he is primarily accountable to himself; that it is more important to respect one's self than to be "popular" with other people. He should break any social or emotional ties that are depressing. He must learn that life promises nothing; that each of us must rustle for what we get. And he should get it through his head that nobody else is really to be envied—if the whole truth could be known. If he wants to to be a "man among men," he must stick on the job of being a man—taking disappointments in his stride, while never losing sight of his goal or faith in himself.

Fruited Tricorns a Seasonable Desesrt

FRUITED TRICORNS, afloat on a sweet pink pond of fruit sirup, make a dessert as intriguing as one's first tricorn hat. They are really individual pies except that the sirup requires that they be served in pudding dishes or saucers rather than on plates. Omit the sirup and you have a tricorn pie, but omitting the sirup takes away some of the flavor.

Any kind of fruit makes good tricorns, so the family's preference may be easily considered. Strawberries, rhubarb and early apples are good, as are canned fruits of every kind.

To give "body" to the fruit and to the sirup, mix two tablespoons of cornstarch with each cup of sugar used to sweeten the fruit. Here is the recipe:

Fruited Tricorns

Sift together 1 teaspoon salt and 3 teaspoons baking powder, 2 cups sifted soft wheat flour. Cut or rub in ½ cup shortening. Add ½ to 2-3 milk and make a soft dough. Turn out on lightly floured board and roll out 1-8 inch thick.. Cut into 3-inch squares. Cut each square diagonally, forming triangles. Place fruit mixture in center of each triangle. Pull the three corners of the dough up over fruit and seal. Bake in moderate oven, 375 degrees, 35 to 45 minutes, or until fruit is done and pastry is well browned. Yield: About ten small tricorns.

Fruit Filling—Mix 2 tablespoons cornstarch with 1 cup sugar. Mix with 2 cups fruit (berries, rhubarb or apples). When fruit has been placed on pastry triangles, dot with 2 tablespoons butter.

Novel Corsage Effect

Hollywood, Calif.—Among the many lovely clothes Bette Davis took East for her vacation, which included three days in New York City, was an evening gown with novel corsage designed by Miss Davis herself. The dress is in white crepe splashed with brilliant red flowers. An overskirt, suggesting a peplum, is edged with very heavy white fringe. Pinned to the shoulder is a corsage of bright red tulips with the upper half showing the petals turned back to dramatize the coal black centers.

Ginger Rogers Gets Back Pounds Lost While Working

By Ida Jean Kain

EVEN THOUGH gentlemen may prefer blondes, Ginger Rogers would rather be a brunette. She says she feels less conspicuous with dark hair.

If almost any other celebrity had told me this, I might have thought she was just making conversation. But Ginger is still the little girl from Independence, Mo., who worked hard and made good and whose success seems to have gone to her dancing feet instead of her head. She really doesn't angle for the limelight.

Ginger has one of the loveliest figures you can imagine. She is so lithe and supple! And although she weighs only 110 pounds for her height of 5 feet 4 inches, she is not thin. She is slim, and her weight is beautifully distributed, as you can see from a glance at her measurements: Bust 33½ inches; waist, a neat 23 inches; hips, 33 inches; thigh, 19¼ inches, and calf, 13½ inches.

An Expert Swimmer

Ginger is one of Hollywood's most perfect examples of what exercise will do for a girl. She is beautifully proportioned without an ounce of fat. In fact, she could weigh a few pounds more without exceeeding the streamline standard.

Ginger didn't tell me, but she is one of Hollywood's best women swimmers, and ranks among the top five tennis and badminton players. She bowls well—and often. And she holds the unofficial movie championship for table tennis.

One of the things about Ginger that interests me most is her exercise program for regaining the dozen or so pounds she regularly loses while making a picture. You might suppose that too much exercise is what causes her to lose the weight in the first place, and that she would be glad to lie around and do nothing after a dance picture. But no. Ginger says it is the nervous strain connected with having a dance routine perfect for the camera that causes the pounds to vanish. She finds outdoor activity away from the grind both exhilarating and relaxing.

Simple Beauty Recipe

And there, it seems to me, is a worthwhile tip for you hardworking, nervous, thin girls who could do with a building up program. If anybody whose work itself is exercise feels the need of tennis, badminton and swimming as a counterbalance to nervous strain, then certainly most of you who work in offices could do with more outdoor sports.

Ginger's beauty "secrets" are refreshingly simple. She relies on plenty of soap, a rough washcloth and lukewarm water. Because she must use make-up for the camera, she likes to give her skin a rest between times. It is a strict rule of hers to go without make-up of any kind for as long as she has had to use heavy makeup.

Oh, yes, on the day of this interview, Ginger was a brunette and a very lovely one. But it seems to me that she is a more striking blonde.

Want to gain weight or whittle your figure to perfect proportions? If so, follow the example of pretty Ginger Rogers (above) and exercise regularly

Garden Fetes, Cocktail Parties and Teas Set New High for Society's 'Little Season'

By Hope Ridings Miller

THE ALL-OUT "little season" round reached a new high yesterday when the town broke out in a rash of garden fetes, indoor teas and informal cocktail parties. From 4 to 7 o'clock, several hundred Capitalites made the rounds with calling cards in hand. When the last guest was received, and the last farewell spoken, a new and hectic chapter had been written in the annals of Washington's social history.

Vice President and Mrs. Wallace were guests of honor at a garden party given by Senator Joseph Guffey and his sister, Miss Ida Guffey, at their home, 2929 Benton Place. At the same time, former Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper were entertaining at an al fresco fete at their home on Woodland Drive. An hour earlier, Mrs. Oscar Chapman and Mrs. Basil Manly had started their tea in honor of Mrs. Edward P. Costigan, widow of Senator Costigan of Colorado. Meanwhile, Mrs. Herbert Feis was hostess in honor of Mrs. Thomas K. Finletter (daughter of Walter Damrosch), whose husband recently was appointed Special Assistant to Secretary Hull; and Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie was gathering in a few friends for tea with her house guest, Miss Margaret Mary Fitz Gerald, of Boston, who is here for the American Youth conference.

More than 200 guests, including a number of Senators, defense officials and residential Washingtonians attended the Guffey party. Senator Guffey and his sister and their guests of honor received in the drawing room, where masses of pink and white peonies, red and white roses and red carnations were attractively arranged in tall vases. Miss Guffey was trimly turned out in a floor-length print frock, featuring a gay red and white floral design on a black background. Mrs. Wallace had chosen a black chiffon dress, cut on simple lines and set off with a wide-brimmed black straw hat.

Pink and white carnations centered the tea table in the dining room, while a huge bouquet of pink roses decorated the buffet at the side. Miss Pauletta Guffey, attired in a smart spring print, and Mrs. Carroll Miller, wearing a blue and white ensemble, mingled in the throng, both indoors and out, and saw that everybody had a good time.

Taking their turns at the tea table were a number of well-known Washingtonians, including Mrs. Hugo Black, Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Mrs. Claude Wickard, Mrs. Alben Barkley, Mrs. Joseph Byrnes, Mrs. Claude Pepper, Mrs. Allen Ellender, Mrs. Sherman Miles and Mrs. Jesse Reed.

Out in the garden, which is bordered with flowers in full bloom, guests gathered around a second refreshment table, which was centered with a huge bouquet of red carnations and roses. The company, accented with many official and social notables, gathered for the most part in the garden, which is one of Washington's beauty spots, and everybody who hadn't planned to go on to other fetes on the afternoon's crowded calendar lingered on as long as possible.

Roper Garden Stirs Admiration

Over on the sweeping lawn of the Roper home, an equally distinguished company wandered over the nicely manicured lawn and went into ecstacies over the flower beds, which are full of blossoms planted and tended by Mrs. Roper herself. Informal from first to last, the party went merrily along until almost an hour after the final time set for it. Mrs. Roper, wearing a floor-length figured frock, received in the long drawing room of her home, and during the first half of the party, her husband stood with her to greet their long line of guests. Later, he succumbed to the urge to mingle with the company in the garden.

The tea table in the dining room, decorated with pink peonies, had a number of prominent hostesses presiding over it. Among those who assisted were Mrs. Ralph William Close, Mme. Vladimir Hurban, Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg, Josiah Bailey, Mrs. Ellison Smith, Mrs. James F. Byrnes, Mrs. O. Max Gardner, Mrs. Fred Britten, Mrs. Edward Riggs, Mrs. James G. Field, Mrs. South Trimble, Miss Elizabeth Smith, Miss Louise Catherine Riggs and Mrs. Grace Roper Bohn, daughter of the hosts.

Coming on to the party in her honor, after attending a youth conference at the White House, Mrs. Edward P. Costigan found a number of her Washington friends already assembled to meet her.

The occasion was the tea given in her honor by Mrs. Oscar Chapman and Mrs. Basil Manly, at the latter's lovely home on Sedgwick Street.

There's a story behind the story of this party on yesterday's calendar. It goes back a number of years to Colorado, when Oscar Chapman managed one of Senator Costigan's campagins. Later, the Senator brought Mr. Chapman to Washington and paved the way for the latter's appointment to his present position as Assistant Secretary of the Interior.

Mrs. Wheeler Assists At Costigan Fete

Remembered in the Nation's Capital as one of the most popular former Senate hostesses, Mrs. Costigan numbers her friends here by the dozens, and many of them were on hand to see her yesterday. In contrast to the other parties already described, the Chapman-Manly fete was entirely indoors, and for women only.

Pink roses, from Mrs. Donald Richberg's flourishing garden, decorated the drawing room, where guests were received, and the dinnig room, where they gathered in large groups around the tea table. Mrs. Manly wore a frock of dark blue chiffon, splashed with white polka dots and trimmed with a white pique collar; while her niece, Mrs. Chapman, had chosen a blue and white costume, made on straight lines.

Alternating at the tea table were Mrs. Alva Adams, Mrs. Joseph O'Mahoney, Mrs. Burton K. Wheeler, Mrs. D. Worth Clark, Mrs. Richberg, Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Mrs. Aubrey Williams and Mrs. Ernest K. Lindley. Among those generally assisting were Mrs. Edgar Goodrich, Mrs. Frank Waring and Miss Patricia Grady.

Small, informal and about as much off-the-record as any Washington party can be was the 4:30 to 6:30 fete given by Mrs. Herbert Feis in honor of Mrs. Thomas K. Finletter, who came here from New York. Another in the for-women-only category, the event drew a number from the State Department contingent and several from the residential set. Mr. Finletter, whose recent appointment went into effect very recently, came to Washington about three months ago. His wife came here early in the spring and they are making their home in the remodeled coach house of Mrs. Arthur Wood's Georgetown estate.

Miss Margaret Mary Fitz-Gerald, who has visited Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie here before, already has a wide acquaintanceship in the Capital, and a number of her friends called to see her yesterday from 5 to 7 o'clock in Mrs. Imbrie's apartment on Sixteenth Street. Miss FitzGerald, like Mrs. Costigan, is here primarily to attend meetings of the American Youth conference, and she came on to the party in her honor directly from a gathering at the White House.

Among those assisting Mrs. Imbrie were Mrs. Joseph E. Casey, Mrs. Walter V. Bingham, Mrs. Hanson Edward Eley, Mrs. John Franklin Carter, Mrs. Joseph Frederick Healey, Mrs. P. Lee Phillips and Mrs. Robert Dulaney Cummin. About 50 men and women attended the fete. Miss FitzGerald plans to be here until Sunday.

Capital Whirl

By Sally Swift

A WEDDING OF MUCH interest to Washington will take place in New York on Sunday, May 25, when Caroline Slutter and Paul O'Neill, jr., are married at the Church of the Ascension. The wedding is scheduled for 1 o'clock, with a reception to follow and several Washingtonians will be on hand, two of them being Jack Segar and Fairfax Leary, jr., who will be ushers.

Fairfax Leary, son of Admiral Leary, now on duty in Hawaii, is a recent bridegroom himself and his wife is the sister of next Sunday's bridegroom. Mrs. Leary will be matron of honor for Miss Slutter. The Learys have taken an apartment in Georgetown since returning from their Nassau honeymoon, and Mr. Leary is working with the OPM as an attorney.

Paul O'Neill has made many friends in the Capital during the time of his preparation for the Foreign Service exams. He was one of the successful ones on the fateful examination day, and will shortly be assigned to his first foreign post, taking his bride with him.

Sunday has been chosen by Miss Slutter for her wedding day as most convenient for the ushers, practically all of whom are in the Army. Guests going up from Washington for the wedding include Mr. and Mrs. Larry White and Mead Patrick. Mr. Patrick will remain in New York for two months on business and will then return to Washington.

COL. AND MRS. Emanuel Lombard—he was for a number of years Military Attache at the French Embassy here—entertained at dinner the other evening when the ranking guest was the Chinese Ambassador. Senator and Mrs. Lister Hill were there, she so attractive with a soft Southern voice, and the Stanley Hornbecks of the State Department. Also present were Mr. and Mrs. Robert T. Pell, Mr. and Mrs. Constantine Brown and Mrs. James M. Helm, social secretary at the White House.

Charles Yost of the State Department will leave next week by clipper for the Philippines in connection with establishing a system of export control for the islands. Mr. Yost is assistant to Joseph Green, Chief of the Division of Controls of the State Department.

Pretty Mrs. Yost is very much hoping that she will be able to make the trip with her husband. While waiting for the decision about her travels, Mrs. Yost is busy making plans and selling tickets for the meeting at the Shoreham next Sunday night of the Emergency Rescue Committee. The committee was organized to rescue the distinguished men and women of art and science who are in danger of arrest by the Nazi Gestapo. The meeting Sunday night will be a discussion, with such well-known speakers as Princess Paul Sapieha, who wrote so interestingly of the tragic fall of Poland, Count Carlo Sforza—exile from Fascist Italy—William Shirer and Genevieve Tabouis.

A VISITOR to Washington is Baroness Kurt Pantz, who has so many friends here from the days when she and her husband lived in the Capital while Baron Pantz was painting the portraits of Washington personalities. Among his sitters were Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, the Portugese Minister, and Mme. Prochnik, wife of the then Austrian Minister, Mme. Prochnik gave a tea that winter to present Baron Pantz' work to her friends.

Baroness Pantz is staying at the Shoreham for a few days before visiting friends in Virginia. Her husband remained at their apartment in New York where he is busily engaged on the portrait sketches which have made him so much in demand.

Working Press Entertained By Roosevelts

By Elizabeth Henney

Washington's working press last evening folded up their war-weary typewriters, put on their best bibs and tuckers, and sallied forth to be guests for the evening of President and Mrs. Roosevelt at the annual White House press party.

Earlier in the evening President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained at dinner in honor of the presidents of the various press organizations.

Guests at dinner included Mr. and Mrs. Stephen T. Early, the President of the Gridiron Club and Mrs. Harold Brayman, the president of the Newspaper Women's Club, Miss Katharine Brooks; the president of the National Press Club, Melbourne Christerson, William D. Hassett, Harry L. Hopkins, Lowell Mellett, Mr. and Mrs. John C. O'Brien, G. Hall Roosevelt and Dr. Kemper Simpson.

Mrs. J. Fred Essary, president of the Women's National Press Club, is now at Hot Springs, Va., and will not be back in Washington until Wednesday.

Journalistic training in split-second timing was most apparent at last night's party. A usual 9 o'clock White House reception finds the lower East Corridor fairly well filled with guests by 8:30. Last evening at quarter to nine the place was virtually deserted. Within 10 minutes, however, a seething mass of people had materialized.

Promptly at 9 the doors were thrown open and the line moved rapidly up the marble staircase, through the main hall and into the Blue Room, where the President, seated in a great carved chair, greeted guests with a hearty handshake. Mrs. Roosevelt, who stood beside him adding her warm welcoming clasp, was gowned in lavendar chiffon, fashioned with a flowing skirt, narrow shoulder cords and a girdle of royal blue faille. With it she wore the famous tiger-claw necklace and clip.

The East Room beyond was a blaze of lights from the crystal chandeliers, and the portraits of George and Martha Washington looked down upon a colorful scene of dancers who swung from Strauss waltzes earlier in the evening to several hot conga numbers before the party ended.

Out on the terrace, guests gathered during the early part of the evening, where they could look down into the garden with its gay row of Japanese lanterns lining the paths and fringing the lily pond. Subject of much speculation and comment was the sudden appearance of a doll-like Japanese woman in the gay native costume of her country. She was Miss Chieko Susuga and was with her fiance, Clark Kawakami, who is the Washington representative of the Japanese Domei News Agency.

Later in the evening most of the crowd wandered down the curving stairs leading from the South portico into the garden, where the fragrance of honeysuckle drifted through the soft summer air and mingled with the malt flavor of the beer being dispensed from a table in the center of the garden.

Notes Gathered on a Random Ramble: . . . Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson swinging Mrs. Stimson out onto the dance floor for a graceful Strauss waltz (she, by the way, had set off her snow-white hair with a black lace gown and necklace of pearls). . . . Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones dancing with the wife of Attorney General Robert H. Jackson (who wore a gown of swirling white chiffon). . . . Mrs. Roosevelt, later in the evening, stopping on the south portico for a long chat with Mrs. Eugene Meyer (she gowned in a paisley print. . . . Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard and Mrs. Wickard (the latter in green chiffon) making the rounds of the garden and terrace. . . . Admiring glances being cast at the lovely frock of Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Vice President. The gown was a print of sea green leaves on a background of blue. . . . Lieut. Charles Benter, leader of the Navy band, and Capt. William F. Santelman, leader of the Marine Band, taking a night off from musical duties and enjoying the fun . . . styles in women's gowns, ranging from peasant style organdy and bright prints, to swirling chiffons sprinkled with silver sparkles . . . hundreds of people greeting old friends, having a perfect old home week, and lots of fun.

About the Town

LIFE IN FRANCE must be particularly trying for an English person these days, so doubtless Mme. Francis Heyberger is delighted to be in America. With her husband, a Frenchman, English-born Mme. Heyberger has arrived to visit her godmother, Mrs. Hennen Jennings, of Washington. Mr. Heyberger fought in the war. The couple came here under the quota.

Mrs. Jennings has a wide acquaintance among the English as a result of the years she lived in South Africa. Her husband was a mining engineer and her son, Coleman, was born in South Africa.

"FIVE YEARS AGO, every distinguished man who weighed more than 190 pounds knew me" laughed Dr. Max Porges. The famous Czech diagonostician, who is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Jouette Shouse, was describing his clinic at Marienbad, where you could find halt the potentates of Europe at one time. Some of his American clientele included Morgans, Vanderbilts, and several Washingtonians, among them Mr. and Mrs. Shouse and the late Larz Anderson.

The huge hotels and baths at Marienbad are now, of course, the property of the Germans, who use them for "Strength through Joy" trips. Workers enjoy what was once the privilege of the rich only, for as little as 50 cents a day—an admirable idea except, Dr. Porges says, the men who run the hotels are rapidly going broke. No Czechs are allowed to participate in the fun at Marienbad unless they become Nazis.

Dr. Porges saw the handwriting on the wall many years ago. When he married an Englishwoman, he had all his belongings transferred to her name. When war came, his property couldn't be confiscated by the Germans and was moved out of Czecho-Slovakia safely.

Then they learned that the maid had ordered the fuses removed. He sayes that it's continually either too hot or too cold here, according to his friends, and wonders how a nation which tells "tough guys" where to get off can be very tough itself when it can't stand temperature changes. The answer is that we are doubtless tough enough, but maybe a little hard up for conversation at times. These days the only really safe topic seems to be the weather.

Women Delegates Cheer Pepper-Wheeler Debate

By Ruth Cowan

Atlantic City, N. J., May 21—Senators Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, and Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, expanded today with verbal fireworks an announced debate on the convoy issue into a discussion of general war effort before an enthusiastic audience at the General Federation of Women's Clubs convention.

Pepper, supporter of convoys, was loudly applauded when he said:

"If we propose to stop that dark genius, Hitler, we must keep him in Europe."

When Wheeler, foe of convoys, walked to the rostrum of Convention Hall he was cheered and from the balcony a woman called, "God bless Wheeler."

Both men were interrupted by hand-clapping as they tossed prepared speeches aside and debated spontaneously, rephrasing each other's questions and picking up statements.

Thousands of hands shot up as Wheeler asked:

"How many of you don't want to go to war?"

Again thousands were raised when Pepper questioned:

"How many of you don't want war to come over here?"

When Wheeler reiterated opposition to sending American soldiers overseas, Pepper replied later.

"I don't want to see your sons die in Europe nor in the swamps of Mexico and South America."

Both men agreed they wanted to see England win.

The Florida Senator offered these suggestions to help preserve the Nation's safety: Settlement of the Sino-Japanese conflict to end danger in the Pacific; help the British free the sea of the German menace; see that American goods are delivered to Britain, and occupation by the United States of certain strategic islands.

Pepper Proposes Safety Measures

"There is a growing belief, both here and abroad, that convoys are not necessary," Wheeler said, adding that after a Monday conference with the President "Senator Barkley, the Majority Leader, is reported to have said that convoys are not necessary to get the goods to England."

Wheeler said $1,300,000,000 of Army and Navy supplies had already been delivered or authorized sent to Britain before the Lend-Lease Act was passed.

Delegates to the convention rejected a move to increase annual dues "equal to the price of an ice cream soda" and then started the discussion all over again.

Most of the morning session was spent in a lively wrangle over a motion to amend the by-laws to increase annual membership dues from a dime to a quarter.

They voted, 706 to 384, to keep the dues at 10 cents after beating down an amendment to the amendment to raise the ante to 15 cents. Their actions defeated the original proposal to raise it to 25 cents.

The treasurer's report showed an $83,000 income from dues and magazine and book sales. The proposed increase in dues would have brought it up to about $150,000 in membership fees alone.

Mrs. Sadie Orr Dunbar, of Portland, Oreg., national president, in pleading for the increase said "there isn't a woman here who couldn't afford to pay" it.

Other delegates among the hundreds who tried to crowd to the microphone opposed the increase on the ground they would lose club members.

Clubs cited for safety work included the Junior Women's Club, Manassas, Va., which won second prize of $25 for clubs of less than 100 members.

Dewey Urges Women To Back Service Drive

By Mrs. Frank M. Hoadley

Atlantic City, N. J., May 21.—Thomas E. Dewey, district attorney of New York, declared yesterday to members of the General Federation of Women's Clubs that the job for women in this National Defense is to get behind the United Service Campaign and assist in providing recreation and the best possible facilities for those in the camps.

Declaring the country was creating a great social problem, he proposed that the women's organizations show the way by providing everything from writing facilities to beds and entertainment for the service men. The women's organizations should be the agencies in camp to keep the boys out of unwise places and send them back home healthy in mind and body, he said. "They should have a place to go without having to pay to sit down."

Dr. Thomas Parran, U. S. Surgeon General, asked the help of the clubs in dealing with problems of health and defense. "We must have a plan against physical unfitness, which includes all diseases," he said. "Health is a prime factor in any plan for defense."

Dr. Parran, pointing out that selective service has found 43 per cent of the young men deferred because of physical defects, declared: "We should go to work to improve that and correct conditions in the community.

"Proper nutrition will add seven years to the life span. Dietary defects are responsible for illness resulting sometimes from an insufficient income and sometimes from insufficient interest. We over-refine and overcook or throw away what we should keep, and depend upon drug store vitamins rather than food," he told the women.

Pre-School Dental Clinic Is Inspected

A completely equipped dental clinic for pre-school children at Children's Hospital was inspected by visitors during the open house held yesterday afternoon, sponsored by the Woman's Auxiliary to the District Dental Society, which is "mother" of the project.

Mrs. William Sweet, retiring president of the auxiliary, which established the original clinic for elementary school children, later expanded it to include those of junior high school age and now, to take in the pre-school group, presided at a short program held in connection with the reception, and Miss Lucia Murchison, assistant superintendent of Children's Hospital, welcomed the guests.

Dr. Joseph Wall, chief of the medical staff of the hospital, reviewed the growth of the hospital clinic, recalling the day when the total dental equipment was two forceps and the dental work was done by two of the resident staff. "One of the forceps was for extracting front teeth and the other for extracting rear teeth," he explained as the audience laughed.

Through the interest of the dental profession and many organizations, particularly the Variety Club, the clinic is now completely equipped he said. Dr. Wall recalled that the pre-school child was once known as the "scrap heap child," because the young infant was brought into the clinics but from that time until he was entered in school he received no attention.

"This situation has been changed, largely through the publicity of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, in its summer roundup activities," he said.

Dr. Walter Rath, chief of the dental staff of the hospital, spoke, of the necessity of a continuous program of dental inspection.

Excelsior Club Elects Mrs. Webb

Mrs. Julia Webb, one of the two women designated as "pioneer clubwomen of the District" at the General Federation's golden jubilee, has been elected president of the Excelsior Litrary Club, of which she has been a member since it was founded. She succeeds Mrs. Lucien H. Sanders.

Other officers for the coming year include Mrs. Alfred W. Foster, first vice president; Mrs. Charles B. Green, second vice president; Mrs. Alice V. Creque, recording secretary; Mrs. Harvey Beaver, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Henry F. Sawtelle, treasurer; Mrs. E. V. Carr, press reporter; Mrs. Sanders, director to the District Federation, with Mrs. Charles Delaney, alternate.

Mrs. Sawtelle will be hostess to the club at its next meeting, June 13.

Relief Society Hears Address By Rep. Weiss

Representative Samuel A. Weiss, of Pennsylvania, yesterday afternoon addressed members of the Jewish Consumptives' Relief Society at a Mothers' Day tea, given at the Jewish Community Center. Speaking on "Uniting the American People in Defense of Democracy," Representative Weiss said:

"The democratic institutions by which we live guarantee not only freedom of speech, freedom of press and the right of free assembly but, what is more important, freedom of religion. In times like the present, when ruthless power dominates world affairs, we should be grateful to God for the liberties we enjoy here.

"In my opinion, this present world conflict can be crystallized into a battle between the forces of God and the anti-God," he declared. "In Fascist Italy, the power of national glory rises above the spiritual conception of religion. In Nazi Germany, ruthless racialism also rises above the true conception of religion. In Communistic Russia, atheistic materialism rises above it. In autocratic Japan, inhuman militarism rises above it, while democracy, on the other hand, is founded on religious ideals, on the conception of the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man.

"The people in America," said Mr. Weiss, "are just becoming cognizant of the privileges which we enjoy here. Americans have constitutional rights because our founders shed their blood and fought for these liberties, but we cannot take these for granted, because every country has made the same mistake. We know that it is only under our form of government that we can hope to have the liberty, the freedom and opportunity which are denied to so many millions of people throughout the world today."

Mrs. Nathan N. Wallack, president of the Washington Chapter of the J. C. R. S., presided and Mrs. Martin Mendelsohn gave a brief speech of welcome to the mothers and daughters present. Music was provided by Eugene Kressin, vocalist, and Frances Kressin, pianist, and the opening prayer was by Mrs. Louis Dinowitz.

ORT Hears Sen. Mead

National unity and wholehearted support of every part of the President's plan for national defense were urged by Senator James M. Mead of New York yesterday in an address before the annual spring luncheon of the Washington Chapter of the Women's American ORT. The luncheon, attended by 200 members and guests, was at Hotel 2400.

Introduced by Mrs. Irwin Geiger, president of the chapter, Senator Mead declared this was a time when "pacifists, isolationists, interventionists and just plain good Americans" could all unite in the urgent defense effort. The encirclement by Hitler has not yet been stopped, he said, "and we have only a few fleeting months in which to build in order to combat it."

He praised the ORT for its program of training for refugees, giving them something with which to help rebuild the world when the war is over.

Girl Scout Leader Speaks

Mrs. Harry C. Kramer, District Girl Scout commissioner, yesterday addressed the luncheon meeting of the District three Scout committee at the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church. About 200 adult workers and friends of the Chevy Chase-Bethesda district attended.

Mrs. Kramer declared Girl Scouting facilities must be increased in Washington.

"We urgently need new leaders to care for the 1,500 girls on the waiting list," she said. "Three fields of activities are being emphasized to meet the present emergency situation: Health and safety, community service and outdoor activities. We must make our girls as conscious of the need for good physical condition as are the youth in the dictator countries. We must develop simple skills which can be put to immediate use.

"Training courses for leaders will be opened this summer," she announced, "and we are encouraging troops to keep going through the season. We must build up that 'impregnable morale' in our boys and girls which is essential to national defense," she declared.

Mrs. Proctor L. Dougherty was in charge of the luncheon. Mrs. Milton Veldee, chairman of the District Three Leaders Association, presided.

C.T.U. Reelects Desper; Rejects A. F. L. Ties

Columbia Typographical Union last night reelected Clarence J. Desper, of The Times-Herald, president, and voted almost 2-to-1 against reaffiliation of the International Typographical Union with the American Federation of Labor.

With two chapels still to be heard from, the unofficial count late last night gave Desper 1,208 votes against 1,080 for Edward C. McEntee, of the News. While the two chapels with 275 votes could still swing the election to McEntee, observers said Desper had enough strength among the uncounted votes to assure him of a second term.

Unofficial count on reaffiliation with the A. F. L. was 1,254 against, 760 for, also with two chapels' ballots uncounted.

U. S. Facing Bankruptcy, Landon Says

By International News Service

Burlington, Kans., May 21.—Alf M. Landon declared tonight the United States is facing expenditures and commitments that will call for an outlay greater than the total cost of the last war.

"Outside the Western Hemisphere," he said, "we are facing a bankrupt world. By the time the war is over, this country also may be bankrupt.

"There is no practical difference of opinion as to the desperate need of speeding up our efforts for national defense. But there is little appreciation of the burden this necessary enterprise will impose upon every one of us."

Guard Rights

The 1936 Republican Presidential candidate, addressing the graduating class of the Burlington High School, said he was not opposed to giving the President all the dictatorial power required to deal with the present war emergency, but he regarded it as imperative that the citizenship prepare to demand a return to democratic processes just as soon as the emergency is over.

"As I have said, to fight successfully a war, and a long war, dictatorial powers are necessary. But I do crave a citizenship jealous of their rights and privileges," he said.

"If we had a Congress jealous of its legislative powers I would feel much happier over the prospect of our future Government. Without these two things we really do not have an impressive and forceful check on the already enormous powers of the Chief Executive. And these powers will be very materially enhanced by war."

Landon said that the obvious peril confronting the United States made it all the more necessary that freedom of expression and opinion should not be limited.

RFC's Defense Bill Hits Snag in Rules Group

Copyright by New York Times

The House Rules Committee discussed yesterday a bill giving the Reconstruction Finance Corporation wide powers over the defense program but deferred action after the Republican minority declared the pending measure would "create the power to set up a Fascist state in America."

The bill before the Rules Committee would delegate to the President and the RFC "such powers as they deem necessary in order to expedite the defense program." This blanket authority was opposed in the Rules Committee meeting by Representative Jesse Wolcott (Republican), of Michigan, who said that, if passed, the bill "would give the Government power to threaten all industries that don't line up with a competing Government industry."

Chairman Adolph J. Sabath of the Rules Committee indicated that in view of the opposition to the bill, it might be sent back to the Banking Committee.

Chevy Chase Chanters Score Again at Spring Concert

J. Horace Smithey directs the Chevy Chase Chanters in their annual spring concert Wednesday night in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing Auditorium. Guest artist: Sylvia Meyer, harpist, assisted by Quinta Jensen Frey, pianist.

By Ray C. B. Brown

How many friends the Chevy Chase Chanters have made during the decade and a half of their activity could have been estimated from the size of the assemblage that filled the Bureau of Engraving Auditorium last evening for their annual spring concert. It was a demonstrative and congratulatory audience that extended a hearty welcome to the group of ousiness and professional men who sing for the pleasure of making music together. Of the 40 members of the choral organization, 31 participated in the concert.

BROWN

Their singing was marked by an excellent balance between the low and high voices, precision of attack and accuracy in phrasing. It was evident that the director, J. Horace Smithey, prefers a restrained and even quality of tone, for the volume was generally subdued and equable. As a result of this discipline, there was no harshness in the blended voices at any time, nor any straining for effects of climax.

The program began with Palestrina's "Adoramus Te, Christe," which was followed by Leisring's setting of "O Filii et Filiae," Brahms' arrangement of a Swabian folksong, and the oldest known harmonized song, "Sumer is icumen in," dating fro mthe early thirtenth century. This song, in Wessex dialect, is attributed to John de Fornsete, or John of Forncett, a monk in Reading Abbey, but the authenticity of the date is questioned by some historians because no song of equal melodic beauty and expertness in canon-writing appeared until 150 years later.

In the second group were combined Tipton's "Hymn to the Night," Lang's "Everyone Suddenly Burst Out Singing," Camilieri's "I Only Hear the Simple Voice" and Mallotte's "Song of the Open Road." The closing group contained Dickinson's "Music When Soft Voices Die," the sea chantey, "What Shall We Do With the Drunken Sailor;" James' "Who's That Tapping at My Door" and Roberton's arrangement of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic."

Sylvia Meyer, one of the most accomplished harp players of our day, made two appearances on the program as guest artist. In the first she was assisted by Quinta Jensen Frey at the piano in the familiar dances by Debussy. In a solo group she offered pieces which required the latest technical devices for utilizing the tonal potentialities of the harp: Salzedo's "Chanson dans la nuit" and "Introspection" and Grandjany's arrangement of two French folksongs. When urged by applause to add an encore, she responded with Salzedo's "Whirlwind."

Editor Who Urged U. S. to Enter War Denies Nazi Charge

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, May 21.—Gerald Barry, editor of the News Chronicle, mass circulation London newspaper which this morning appealed editorially to the United States to enter the war immediately as an active combatant on Britain's side, today denied the German charges that the editorial was government inspired.

"Neither Prime Minister Churchill nor any other British official saw the editorial in advance," said Barry.

The News Chronicle urged American entry into the war in order "not to save us from defeat but to help us to victory—quickly." Only American aid could keep the conflict from lasting so long that Europe might be "reduced to savagery," it said.

17-Day U. S. Bond Sale Totals $257,646,000

Sale of the Defense Savings Bonds has netted the Government a total of $257,646,000 in the first 17 days' sale, Secretary Morgenthau announced yesterday.

The report to the Treasury Department is based on the following items: Series E, $61,658,000; Series F, $28,221,000, and Series G, $167,767,000.

Latin Airlines Of Axis Called Trojan Horse

Oswald Ryan, member of the United States Civil Aeronautics Board, said last night the large German-Italian commercial aviation network in South America must be eliminated because it is in reality a winged Trojan horse which is "dangerous to our national life."

"The aviation of all the Americas must be made truly and safely American," he said in a nationwide broadcast (CBS) which presumably had the Administration's sanction.

His remarks recalled a recent statement by Federal Loan Administrator Jesse Jones that under a bill now pending before the House the Reconstruction Finance Corporation could set up a commercial airline in Latin America. Jones told a press conference yesterday that expansion of aviation facilities in South America is being studied.

Ryan declared that the Axis inter-American network is not a commercial enterprise, but "a well-considered instrumentality of national policy which is bent upon the cultural and political domination of the South American Continent."

". . . Some of the landing fields of this Axis network are within bombing range of important United States bases in Trinidad, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands; and within bombing range of that key to our naval and military defense—the Panama Canal," he said.

Ryan said that a new Brazilian route established by the German airline, Condor, "offers no commercial opportunity, but does call for the establishment of landing fields which will be strategically located close to the city of Natal on the bulge of Brazil."

"Natal," he added, "lies within eight hours' flight of the French-controlled fortress city of Dakar on the coast of Africa, and France's new agreement to 'collaborate' with Germany gives this fact new and vital significance . . .

"If this hemispheric should be attacked by hostile planes, Dakar . . . in all probability would be the jumping-off place. And if this nation should be attacked, it would be from South American air bases that enemy aircraft would operate against us."

Stork Paid in Pennies

Chicago, May 21 (INS).—Four years ago when their daughter, Penny, was born, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Aronson paid for her arrival with 18,500 pennies they had saved. Today Mrs. Aronson gave birth to a son, "Nicky," and his advent was paid for with three cigar boxes full of pennies. They had started to save up nickels, but the demands of their coin telephone proved too much.

After 49 Years They Part

Bloomfield, Iowa, May 21 (AP).—Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Henderson were scheduled to celebrate their golden wedding anniversary next November 22.

But they went separate ways today after 49½ years together. Mrs. Henderson was granted a divorce here on grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Staggered paydays for Federal employes will be made effective on July 1 by a White House order, it was reported reliably yesterday, if Congress doesn't act in the meantime. Federal employes will welcome the change. The plan that is being worked on by the Administration is far different from the Capper plan that is awaiting action in both the Senate and the House. The Administration would make the staggered pay plan far more effective by paying a tenth of the employes here on each of five days a week, Monday through Friday. Individual employes would be paid every other week.

Senior Capper is pushing a plan that would pay half the employes on the 7th and 22nd and the other half on the 15th and last days of the month. Representative Hebert has introduced an identical bill in the House. The Capper plan would relieve the pay day jam here somewhat, but the Administration would take off the pressure altogether by making every full work day a pay day.

The five paydays a week plan has been opposed on the ground that it would create more work and increase the Government's operating expense. Competent Federal officials say it isn't so. The Treasury, for example, is confident that it can absorb any work increase. The fact is that the increase of work wouldn't be a factor worth consideration. The individual employe would be paid 26 times a year under the extended staggered pay plan instead of 24 times. The only additional work involved would be the making up of two additional pay rolls which the Treasury believes can be done without adding new employes.

A poll of employes to determine how they would like to be paid and when has been proposed. Not one single complaint has been made to this column on any staggered payday plan. The average Federal employe appears to feel that any change from the present system would be for the better. Moreover, the employe wants to make sure that he's paid, but when makes little difference, just so it's on a regular basis. Some employes have suggested weekly paydays. However, this plan would really run up the Government's operating costs, as twice as much work would have to be done in making up pay rolls and writing checks. Paydays on Tuesdays and Thursday for 25 per cent of the employes on each day, also has been proposed. This plan also calls for individual paydays every other week and 26 a year.

State Department has hired 65 new employes in its expanded Visa Division which will investigate persons who apply for visas to enter the country. Approximately 175 others will be hired from civil service registers. . . . Two more Harvard Law School graduates have been promoted at FCC. Lucien A. Hilmer has been made assistant general counsel in charge of broadcasting and Thomas Harris transferred from the office of Solicitor General Biddle to succeed Joe Rauh as special assistant.

The President's message asking Civil Service for WPA administrative employes in no way affects the thousands of employes in agencies paid from relief funds like GAO, Treasury, Agriculture and the like. The Ramspeck Act brings these employes under the merit system but specifically excludes WPA workers . . . Incidentally, Representative Tenerowicz yesterday introduced a bill to extend Civil Service to WPA employes at the request of UFWA . . . Stephen A. Willey, Navy Yard employe, has been elected commander of the Malin Craig Post . . . It's reported that Mayor LaGuardia's Office of Home Defense will hire a considerable number of newspapermen to publicize its efforts.

Uncle Sam during the month of March stepped up the hiring of new employes here from 100 to 185 a day which brought the total of departmental employes in the District to 167,061. War, Navy, OPM and OEM hired the bulk of the 5,554 new employes. The total number of Federal workers here, counting Navy Yard and other field employes, is estimated as well over 195,000. The end of hiring isn't in sight. In the entire country the number of Government employes on April 1 was 1,202,348. Each new employe hired both here and on the outside sets a new high record.

D. C. Schools Limit Role In Defense

Board Decides Use of Buildings As First-Aid Centers Isn't Practicable

The Board of Education yesterday authorized use of public school buildings for the next Selective Service registration after June 30, but indicated only their restricted use for first-aid stations in medical emergency service under the local defense program.

The board authorized Superintendent F. W. Ballou to notify Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, that the stations might interfere with the school program during the regular session. However the buildings might be used between June 25 and September 20 when most of the schools are closed for vacation. Dr. Ballou said in the statement to be sent to Ruhland:

"The superintendent is of the opinion that such limited use as might be made of the public schools for emergency first-aid purposes would be so restricted as to make it unwise to contemplate their use for any first-aid purposes which might become necessary if the Nation's Capital were attacked," Dr. Ballou's statement said.

Police Stations Ruled Out

Dr. Ballou pointed out that the Committee on Health in the local Defense Council first considered the possibility of using police precincts for these first aid stations, but that police officials indicated that such use would interfere with the department's work.

The board's action to permit "use of such public school buildings as may be needed" for the Selective Service registration followed receipt of a communication from Col. C. A. Dravo, assistant State director, Selective Service. He requested headquarters in the following schools: Area 1, Western High School; 2, Woodrow Wilson High; 3, Deal Junior High; 4, Calvin Coolidge High; 5, Paul Junior High; 6, Macfarland Junior High; 7, Powell Junior High; 8, Adams; 9, Grant; 10, Cooke; 11, Central High; 12, Gage; 13, Thomson; 14, Jefferson Junior; 15, Hine Junior; 16, Buchanan; 17, Eliot Junior; 18, Stuart Junior; 19, Dunbar High; 20, Taft Junior; 21, McKinley Junior; 22, Langdon; 23, Eastern High; 24, Anacostia Junior-Senior; 25, Cardozo High.

Dr. Ballou, who is completing his twenty-first year as superintendent, was reelected to another three-year term by the board yesterday.

The board approved for insertion in the 1943 budget an item for purchase of land in the vicinity of the recreation center at Nichols and Sumner Avenues Southeast, and an item for the construction of an elementary school building of 16 or more rooms there to replace the Birney School.

The Sweetheart of Sigma Chi

TOAST OF FRATERNITY—Brown-eyed Brunette Betty Lane, 22, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence H. Small, of Olney, Md., was acclaimed "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi" last night at the annual spring dance of the George Washington University chapter of the fraternity. Miss Lane, who formerly attended Pennsylvania State College, is a senior student at G. W. U. She is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority.

Conduit Road Citizens Elect McGhee Head

Conduit Road Citizens Association, at its final meeting of the season, last night elected C. E. McGhee its new president.

Serving the term with him will be A. D. MacKinnon, first vice president; Mathis J. Johnson, second vice president; Mrs. Irene O'Connor, recording secretary; Mrs. Sidney Gambill corresponding secretary and George Morse, treasurer. Frank Shull and McGhee will be delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations; Thomas Regan and Walter Cunyus, to the Northwest Citizens Council.

Five new members were inducted: Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gray, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Landstreet and John L. Herbert.

The association voted to condemn the action of the National Capital Parks Office which, according to the resolution, revoked the permit of American Legion Post, No. 40, to use the Palisades Park clubhouse as a meeting place. The parks office gave as its reason for revocation that the post's meetings were not open to the public. Post officials contended that other legion units meet in downtown Government buildings and that No. 40 had been meeting at Palisades for the last four years.

The organization approved the proposed nine-man recreation board for the District, and the Whitehurst traffic program, suggesting that the latter be financed half by a gas tax and half by the Federal Government.

It was moved to ask the Commissioners for installation of traffic lights at Thirty-sixth Street and Reservoir Road, and to request Capital Transit to run express buses from Twentieth and K Streets to Thirty-fifth Street and Reservoir Road during rush hours.

New D. C. Rules On Liquor Start Tuesday

Additional regulations governing the sale of liquor were announced by the Commissioners yesterday. They become effective next Tuesday.

Liquor stores, which now remain open until midnight, must close at 10 p. m. on all weekdays except Saturday when the announced regulations become official.

But, under the new setup, retail stores will be permitted to remain open until midnight on Saturdays and all days prior to legal holidays.

The Commissioners' order prohibits the sale of intoxicants and issuance of new licenses for establishments within 400 feet of schools and churches. This, however, does not apply to clubs or hotels.

In addition, all retail merchants are restrained from placing signs or placards in their windows advertising prices.

Further prohibitions in the advertising of liquor and other spirits include:

The use of false and deceiving statements in connection with the name, class, type and proof of advertised beverages.

Ads which fail to specify whether the beverage contains neutral spirits or neglect to tell the percentage thereof.

Whitehurst May Leave Defense Post

Report Asserts He Will Ask Release But He Refuses To Confirm It

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, will ask to be replaced as executive vice chairman of the District Defense Council because of the "press of other business," it was learned reliably at the District Building late yesterday.

Whitehurst declined to comment on the report beyond explaining that any such request would be made directly to the Commissioners "and none has been made as yet."

He said, however, that in view of the President's recent order on civil defense plans, a meeting of his seven committee chairmen has been called for next Monday and indicated the entire local defense setup might be revamped to prevent "overlapping" duties.

Whitehurst said he had not been notified officially of the President's order, but expected to receive a copy in time for Monday's meeting.

President Roosevelt on Tuesday announced a schedule of activities to be followed by state and municipal defense councils, naming New York's Mayor F. H. LaGuardia to head an office of civilian defense.

Meanwhile, at 10 a. m. today, 60 local women will begin special courses in volunteer defense work preparatory to city-wide registration of volunteers next month. The course will be held at the Junior League, 2001 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest.

Miss Lenroot to Speak

Miss Katherine Lenroot, chief of the U. S. Childrens' Bureau, will discuss "The Importance of the Volunteer in our Community Defense."

The seven local defense council committee chairmen called for Monday's meeting are Maj. Ernest W. Brown, civil protection; Robert E. Bondy, welfare and consumer interest; Dr. George C. Ruhland, health; J. Blake Gordon, housing, works and facilities; Porter M. Lumpkins, human resources and skill; P. Y. K. Howatt, industrial resources and production; and Mrs. Harry S. Bernton, volunteer service.

Women to begin the training course today are:

Mrs. Frederick Altemus, Mrs. D. F. Anderson, Mrs. David A. Baer, Mrs. Charles A. Baker, Mrs. Adrienne Barth, Mrs. Merrill Beede, Mrs. Brian Bell, Miss Katherine C. Berry, Mrs. Farnum Blair, Mrs. Tecumseh Bradshaw, Mrs. Bernon Brewster, Mrs. Radford Brown, Mrs. B. A. Chandler, Mrs. Wayne Coy, Mrs. Davidson, Mrs. J. Blaise de Sibour, Mrs. Laszlo Detre, Mrs. L. K. Little Congress' Speaker

FIRST DEMOCRATIC WOMAN SPEAKER—Little Congress last night elected Mazie Bledsoe, speaker. Miss Bledsoe, secretary to Representative William Nelson, of Missouri, is the first woman Democrat elected to the post since the formation of the organization 22 years ago. Here, Representative Nelson presents her the gavel.

Appeals Court For District To Be Asked

Congress soon will be asked to set up a new court of three judges to hear appeals from the Municipal, Police and Juvenile Courts.

Appeals from these courts now are heard by the United States Courts of Appeals here, but only in exceptional cases and by express order of the higher court. Review by the proposed new tribunal will be a matter of right to the person losing in the lower court.

The proposal will be added to a measure now pending in the House which provided for consolidation of the Municipal and Police Courts under a single presiding judge with administrative powers. Also proposed are ten-year terms for the judges, a pension plan for their retirement and increase of the jurisdiction to $2,000, with a view to relieving the burden on the District Court. The Municipal Court now hears civil cases involving $1,000 or less.

Alexander Holtzoff, special Assistant Attorney General, prepared a bill incorporating the appellate court idea with the reforms previously agreed upon after conferences among legal authorities.

Pharmacists Convene, Ask Law Revision

Through proposed amendments to the pharmacy law here, correction of abuses "in the manufacture, sale and peddling of drugs and preparations by others than druggists, the elimination of fake wholesale houses and a better inspection service" are sought, Morris G. Goldstein, retiring president of the District Pharmaceutical Association, told its eighty-ninth annual meeting yesterday.

Addressing the opening session of the meeting at the Shoreham Hotel, he urged the employment of a full-time secretary for the association.

A buffet supper and dance were held last night. Today the association will turn to another business session, featured by report of the resolutions committee and a discussion of the Pure Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act. Irving Tennyson, incoming president, and other new officers will be installed at a banquet tonight.

Approximately 350 persons had registered for the meeting last night.

School Plan For Federal Aides Urged

Personnel Chief Speaks at Closing Session of Civil Service Parley

"An adequate selection system for Government personnel should be geared into the educational system" to insure a constant stream of the kind of ability that will develop into administrative leadership, Dr. Frederick M. Davenport, chairman, Council of Personnel Administration, told the eastern regional conference of the Civil Service Assembly last night.

Speaking at its closing dinner at the Wardman Park Hotel, Dr. Davenport, who is also advisory counsel, National Institute of Public Affairs, said:

"We still lack adequate recruitment for the higher administrative services, and have long lacked it in spite of the cavalier announcement of a recent Government report on civil service improvement to the effect that potential administrative ability of a high order can be found at hand in the departments and agencies in sufficient amount to meet the normal requirements of the Government.

"Well, there isn't going to be any more normalcy, and there never should have been any! In war or peace, this must be henceforth a dynamic country with the leadership of something approaching the wisest and the best, or no country at all!"

He said assurance of a constant stream of ability coming into the Government personnel at its source "may be brought about by the orderly recruiting every year of a reservoir of administrative talent from the ranks of the younger workers in the Government service, and also from the fresh and vigorous blood of the educational institutions of the country . . . to be trained each year as assistants or juniors to fill the gaps in the service. This is primarily what the educational system of the country is for."

Dr. Herman Finer, of England, speaking at the dinner on "Defense Administration in England," said that persons who believe efficiency in war means the end of democratic government should consider the British Parliament.

It has "never been more vigorous or flourishing or resolute in our history for a combination of military and economic efficiency and civil liberties," he said.

Nothing that the Germans can do can affect the will of the English people "to see this thing through to the end," said Dr. Finer, visiting professor at the University of Chicago.

Realtor Urges Home Builders Keep Control of Defense Needs

A huge readustment will be necessary at the close of our war effort, Philip W. Kniskern, Philadelphia, national leader of realtors, last night told Washington realtors at the Mayflower Hotel In meeting the emergency demands, it is of highest social importance that we utilize existing facilities to the full and minimize this inevitable readjustment, he advised.

Speaking at a meeting celebrating the twentieth anniversary of the Washington Real Estate Board and the twenty-ninth of local organized real estate, Kniskern, president, National Association of Real Estate Boards, parent group, emphasized that while for present and future economic health it is important that a minimum of needed housing be Government-built and a maximum privately built it is essential above all else that we have have the housing we need, where and when we need it.

This means, he explained, that if Government is to refrain from direct construction of housing there must be absolute and convincing proof that necessary housing is, or will be made available by private effort if and as needed. In urging prevention of ghost towns, Kniskern reminded that the Government is still liquidating some of the residential construction of World War I.

History of Organization

It was Samuel Thorpe, Minneapolis, president, National Association of Real Estate Exchanges, who brought the idea of developing a real estate association in Washington, according to Herbert T. Shannon, president of Shannon & Luchs Co. and first secretary of the local organization, another speaker.

"This was in March, 1912," said Shannon, "and he came into our offices on Fourteenth Street, introduced himself and stated the object of his visit. He had many reasons why we should have a real estate association here. He said, 'you experience many pains aches and hurts in competitive business. At times you are abused by the other fellow and possibly either consciously or unconsciously you may have abused someone in the business yourself. Now, how in the world can you iron out these things except by contact and cooperation with your fellow brokers. And it is this way alone that there can be developed in time a spirit among you which strives to find what is best for the whole business.'"

The speaker and his partner telephoned a number of real estate men, saw them personally, and the next afternoon at 4 o'clock, they met in one of the Red Parlors of the Ebbitt House, then at Fourteenth and F Streets. Among those present were Thorpe, William H. Saunders, George Y. Worthington, John L. Weaver, J. P. Story, Charles W. Fairfax, A. S. Gardiner, sr., Lee D. Latimer, Harry K. Boss, John C. Weedon, Morton J. Luchs and Shannon.

William H. Saunders was elected president and George Y. Worthington, vice president. Later in the week, at a meeting in the offices of the Chamber of Commerce, then at Twelfth and F Street Northwest, organization was begun.

It was first known as the Real Estate Brokers Association of the District of Columbia and it was not until 1921 that it was reorganized as Washington Real Estate Board with headquarters and a full-time secretary.

A motion picture, "People Come First," was shown through courtesy of Capital Transit Co., and a buffet supper followed the meeting.

Miss Talley Tossed Out of Home On Seeking Her Baby, She Says

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, May 21.—Marion Talley testified today that for over three years she "was afraid" to seek her baby, and that when she did, she was bodily thrown out of her estranged husband's sister's home in Mamaroneck, N. Y.

Miss Talley is suing Adolph Eckstrom for divorce and custody of their 6-year-old child.

She said that from a month after Susan's birth in April, 1935, until early in 1939, when she left Hollywood she was intimidated by prospects of legal retaliation by Eckstrom.

She cited as instance his lawyer's demand for $150,000, while secretly holding Susan as a "pawn," and Eckstrom's later charges that she had been guilty of misconduct with eight prominent men.

However, in 1939 she learned from private detectives that the child was living with Eckstrom's sister, Mrs. Ruth Nelson, at Mamaroneck.

"When I went up to the house and greeted Mrs. Nelson I told her: 'Ruth, I've come to take Susan.'" Miss Talley, the former opera singer, testified.

"She said, 'Oh, no you don't' and I said, 'Yes, I am—I'm her real mother.'

"She took Susan and ran down the driveway, screaming, 'kidnapers, kidnapers,' and calling for her adopted son, Ben, to get police.

"Susan started to cry at all this and said, 'Mommie, mommie, please don't call the police.'"

"Who did she mean when she called, 'Mommie, Mommie?'" asked Miss Talley's attorney.

"Mrs. Nelson.

"I took hold of Susan and asked Mrs. Nelson to give her to me and she said no. She finally asked us in the house and telephoned Mr. Eckstrom and told him I was there to take the baby. After she finished talking to Mr. Eckstrom, she threw me bodily out of the house."

"You mean she threw you out physically?" asked the attorney.

"Very physically."

It was not until later, on court order, that she obtained custody of Susan and now is fighting to keep her.

Miss Talley said that she didn't know the child's whereabouts until late in 1938 when Film Director Aubrey Scotto and his wife brought back a picture of Susan from New York. (Eckstrom later charged Scotto as one of the eight men in his "misconduct" complaint).

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights
Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.
When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Six Navajos Bring Blanket, Complaint to 'White Father'

Six full-blooded Navajo Indians from Arizona arrived in the Capital yesterday with a blanket and a grievance to present to Great White Father Roosevelt.

The group—five of whom were seeing the world outside their reservation for the first time—included Slim Salt, Hugh Black, or Little Count; Nes-Kai Yassie, or Little Fat; Dan Phillips, or Pinto Shirt; Johnnie Chief, the medicine man, and his wife.

Accompanying the braves is the Rev. "Shine" Smith, Presbyterian missionary, who has lived with them for 25 years. Born in Rome, Ga., he acquired his nickname long ago teaching Indian children to sing "Shine in the Corner Where You Are."

The band left their 20,000 square-mile reservation by automobile and motored as far as Durango, Colo. There they boarded a train for Denver, but not before their medicine man had produced a small buckskin bag, "totta-deen" and sprinkled the aisle of the glistening streamliner with sacred corn meal.

The braves' trip was financed by friends on the huge reservation of 50,000 Navajos who contributed nickles and dimes. They came to protest the Government's edict that an Indian may own no more than 350 head of sheep.

"If the great white father cut down any more on our sheep herds we die," said Johnny Chief.

Yesterday they saw John Collier, Indian commissioner, but not the President. The delegation went to the White House, only to learn the President had gone out for an afternoon automobile ride.

"Never mind," was Johnnie Chief's reply, "we come back again tomorrow."

Twin Objections Raised Against Congress Recess

By the Associated Press

Twin objections arose yesterday against a summer recess for Congress.

Anticonvoy Senators said they would demand that their colleagues stay on the job to keep an eye on turbulent world affairs.

House tax experts declared months would be required to complete legislative action on the Administration's $3,500,000,000 tax bill.

Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, an outspoken opponent of intervention, said he would oppose any suggestion that Congress quit for more than three days at a time for fear of developments which might bring this country nearer to war.

With regard to the tax situation, Chairman Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, of the House Ways and Means Committee, made one of the most optimistic house forecasts when he expressed belief that it would be "at least a month" from now before his committee finished writing the measure.

That would be near the end of June. It would require a week or more for the House to pass the legislation and then Senate committee and Senate action would have to follow.

Cartoonists' Strike Settled in Hollywood

Hollywood, May 21 (AP).—A strike of the Studio Cartoonists Guild against Leon Schlesinger Studio was settled last night.

Aubrey Blair, A. F. of L. organizer, said the studio had granted a 10 per cent wage increase to all workers making $35 or less a week and similar increases to workers in 14 other classifications.

Harry Sadicoff, Schlesinger counsel, said the pay boosts would increase the studio's annual payroll about 7 per cent.

Maurois Warns U. S. to Guard Its Democracy

A greying man, gentle of speech and manner, stood before an audience of 500 at the Mayflower Hotel last night and pleaded that Americans guard against the stroke that befell his native France.

He was Andre Maurois, the French writer whose works are as familiar to English speaking peoples as to his own countrymen. He spoke for the benefit of French victims of the war under the auspices of the Washington Chapter of the United Committee for French Relief.

"The defeat of France was not so much a military defeat as it was an industrial defeat," he said, adding that the war was lost in the years 1935-1939 when France failed to arm and not on the battlefields of 1940.

Credits voted by the governments of France and England for national defense at the beginning of the war were inadequate, Maurois declared. "A lack of political courage was the first fault of our governments," he said. "It was not parliaments nor public opinion but great leadership that was needed."

Lost Mastery of Air

Strikes, jealousies and political differences caused production in France to slow up, said Maurois, citing the fact that at no time were there more than 50,000 French workers engaged in aircraft production while Germany had 150,000 employes toiling 60 hours a week. Germany had at the same time an overwhelming military majority, he pointed out.

"The war in France, just as the war in Norway, Holland, Yugoslavia and Greece, proved that the nation which loses the mastery of the air has lost the land," he declared.

"In order to make democracy possible, the minority must be willing to be ruled by the majority after a vote. And a majority must be willing to respect the rights of the minority."

"We've Got to Rebuild"

Admitting that France has been weak in all these respects, Maurois warned by implication that America must not succumb to the same weaknesses.

He held out hope for the future of his country, saying:

"We've got to rebuild our country and we will. It is only through strength and discipline that countries, like individuals, can be saved.

"Forty million hard working, gifted men and women can't have changed over night because her leaders built too few planes and tanks. Her soul is not changed. You can't deprive the French people of knowledge, of good taste. You can't deprive the French peasants of their love of work, nor the young men of their military virtues and bravery."

Stating simply, "I haven't lost courage," he said a line from Byron should be the motto of every Frenchmen in these times:

"Here's a heart for every fate."

Burglars Find $290 in Piano And Ice Box

Concealment of $290 in a piano and an ice box failed to baffle burglars yesterday, according to reports sent to police by two restaurant owners.

Edward F. Weller, 26, proprietor of a lunchroom at 1724 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, told police his place of business was ransacked early yesterday and $200 in bills and change stolen from a hiding place inside a piano.

Intruders at a restaurant in the 3200 block Mount Pleasant Street Northwest, found $90 the proprietor had cached in an ice box, Peter Glekas, reported to police. Police examined both places for fingerprints.

Reconciled, Wife Poisons Herself

A certificate of suicide was issued by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald late yesterday after an autopsy on the body of Mrs. Mary Miller, 39, of 5320 Eighth Street Northwest, disclosed she died of poison.

The woman collapsed at her home about 1 a. m. yesterday and was taken to Emergency Hospital where she died at 3:05 a. m.

Detective Sergt. John Wise of the homicide squad said he was unable to establish any reason for the woman's action. He was told by her husband that they were separated but had recently adjusted their differences and were planning to return together.

64-Seat Airliner Developed To Give U. S. Rule of Airways

Development of a high-speed 64-passenger transport plane which would bring every capital in the Western Hemisphere within 16½ hours flying time of the United States was announced yesterday by Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc.

The largest land transport yet built, the huge ship has been under secret development for the past two years by Howard Hughes, speed flier and chairman of the board of the Hughes Tool Co., of Houston, Tex., and Jack Frye, president of TWA, at the Lockheed Aircraft plant in Burbank, Calif.

Frye revealed that 40 of the planes now are on order for TWA, the first of which is scheduled to be delivered next spring.

He said the plane is a new type transport of revolutionary performance which would insure this country "virtual domination of the air from a commercial standpoint for several years to come."

Features of the plane include four 2,500-horsepower Wright engines; capacity as a luxury liner for 64 persons, including a crew of 7, or a capacity of 16 tons net load as a cargo plane; a top speed of 350 miles per hour and cruising speed of 283 miles; a 4,000-mile range; supercharged cabin and engines permiting operations up to 30,000 feet.

D. C. Facing Suit On $71,000 From Parking Meters

Legal action to force restoration of more than $71,000 in surplus parking meter revenues into the District highway fund was threatened yesterday by the American Automobile Association.

The club contended that this surplus money has gone into the city's general fund and is not being used for highway maintenance purposes.

The club pointed out that legislation under which 309 parking meters were installed in downtown Washington in November, 1938, made no provisions for disposition of surplus revenue over and above the $13,905 purchase and installation costs.

"Owing to this joker in the law," said the AAA, "a total of $71,943 of parking meter revenue has gone into the general fund up to May 9, 1941."

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

The length of time which Buddy Baer will be permitted to spend in the ring with Joe Louis tomorrow evening will be governed strictly by Baer's behavior in the first couple of rounds, it is being hinted in Louis' camp.

POVICH

Louis isn't mad at Baer. The only fighter the Negro champion was ever mad at was Max Schmeling. That was in their second bout, and Louis was angry about their first affair when Schmeling fetched him a lot of mean licks on the chin and knocked him out. Schmeling was taking bows on that one for nearly two years and a sort of hate for the fellow was beginning to smoulder with Louis. He was the killer from the opening gong in their second bout and dispatched Schmeling in 2 minutes and 40 seconds of the first round. His own handlers had never seen Louis so vicious.

Characteristically, Louis has made no boasts about 'knocking out Buddy Baer. In his own words, he ain't mad at nobody. He has been saying, generously, that Baer is a big, strong fellow who "can hit pretty hard, I guess." But the tip-off on the fight can be gleaned from Jack Blackburn, the trainer who has taught Louis all he knows about the ungentle art of box-fighting.

Blackburne was discussing Louis' last two fights wherein such fistic nonentities as Abe Simon and Tony Musto went a total of 22 rounds with the champion. Blackburn wasn't particularly dismayed by that fact. Louis isn't slipping, he said. In fact, Joe's a better, smarter fighter than at any time in his career.

"You notice," Blackburn was saying, "that these tough guys like Schmeling and Galento and Max Baer don't stay in there too long with Joe. Joe likes to belt those kind out quick. He don't like to waste any time fooling around with fellahs what might pull one up from the floor, accidental like, and clip him. That's too dangerous. These other fellows like Simon and Musto, well, they ain't gonna hurt nobody. On the worst night Joe ever had, he ain't gonna lose his title to those fighters. He's too smart to crack up his hands on a big lug he's gonna beat anyway.

"Joe'll know how to handle this Buddy Baer pretty quick after they send 'em out there. If Baer behaves and don't get too tough right quick, Joe might not get too tough, either. But the first time Joe figures he better get rid of that big guy before something bad happens, Joe'll do all right and it ain't gonna last long after that."

That seems to account pretty thoroughly for the strategy in Louis' camp with the fight less than 36 hours distant. If Baer behaves, and is as inept and apathetic as he appeared in the Galento fight here least month, he may be around with Louis for a few rounds, but at the first sign of any threat to Louis' title, the champ will probably be in there to chop him down quickly.

Baer is assuredly no more deft with either his feet or his fists than was big Primo Carnera, and Louis had no trouble banging Primo around and knocking him out. The fellows Louis has had trouble with are the shiftier, running type of Bob Pastor, Arturo Godoy and Tommy Farr. The Carneras and the Baers (both of 'em) are the perfect target for Louis. The crouch defense that Simon, Godoy and Galento used to baffle Louis for a time is out, in the case of Buddy Baer. He's too big to crouch, a maneuver that would merely bring his chin into closer range.

Tony Galento skated a few punches off Baer's chin at Uline's Arena and Buddy Boy definitely did not like 'em. For Galento it must be said that he is no powder-puff puncher, but nobody ever accused Louis of being the same and Joe hits with a great deal more frequency.

Blackburn says Joe knows how to deal with these big fellows. "He crowds 'em. Ain't no sense standing away where they can take those wild shots with their long reach. One of 'em might land and hurt somebody. No use taking any chances. Anyway, Joe can fight better in close than those big guys. He can hurt 'em in close, and they ain't gonna hurt him. When Joe starts climbing aboard 'em you know he's doing all right."

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, May 21.—Here are some well-known facts about the little known golfers who'll give their all tomorrow at Fresh Meadow at the opening of the annual $5,000 Goodall Round Robin, the tournament that makes golf-gazing a pleasure:

CONSIDINE

Ben Hogan has been in the money in his past 47 tournaments, an unparalleled record in golf. He has been out of the money only once since that dour day in 1938, in Seattle, when he and his wife were stony broke and Ben had to go out and shoot a 67 on an empty stomach so that they could get back home . . . he's the only pro who practices in the rain—to get himself accustomed to picking them off a soggy turf . . . he's the best card-trick artist in sport, with the possible exception of Joe Kuhel . . . his low line drives, off the tee, are a joy to watch. He weighs only 140 pounds, but he hits some of the longest and straightest woods in captivity . . . his nerves key up as much as his fellow Texan's—Lew Jenkins'.

Craig Wood, masters champion at 39, finished last in the 1940 Goodall. Then he did an unheard of thing for a seasoned golfer. He changed his grip and swing and has been hot as a rivet ever since. He's one of the nicest guys in sport. Chain smoker. Has tied for first place in every big tournament, but couldn't click until the recent masters.

Sarazen Knows the Course—Anyway

Gene Sarazen knows more about the Fresh Meadow course than the greenskeeper. That's where he won the 1932 Open with a Whirlaway finish—the last 29 holes in 100 knocks. Never wastes time. Just steps up and hits one. He's a competitor who should be remembered with Cobb.

Most interesting guy in the field is Jimmy Demaret, who bounded to fame during the 1940 winter circuit by winning six straight tournaments—something that is considered impossible in this most up-and-down of all sports. About the only big spender among the pros, except, of course, Hagen. Has a bad ticker, so he's having a good time. Wears cowboy boots when not playing.

Best looking fellow—Dick Metz. Lot of stomach, too, for he nearly lost a foot in an auto accident. Wouldn't let the doctors lop it off, even though they warned him that leaving it on would mean his life . . . Jimmy Hines, the golfer, not the politician. He's crowding 40, great mudder, won the medal at the San Francisco match play Open with an infected hand that was excruciating. It sent him to the hospital for two days. Cold putter . . . Clayton Heafner, who broke one of Bobby Jones' greatest records—the club-throwing mark. Used to fling clubs almost out of sight, in high dudgeon, but he has cooled off. Hasn't touched a drink in a few years. Great talent which, if properly harnessed, could make him tops in the game.

Jimmy Thomson, perhaps the hottest Brooklyn Dodger fan in existence. Gives more exhibitions than any player in the business. Consistently the longest hitter in golf history, but he hasn't won a tournament since the Los Angeles Open in 1938. Married to Viola Dana . . . Paul Runyan, smallest man in the field and shortest hitter. But never off the fairway. P.G.A. winner in 1934 and 1938. His style is a sample of how not to hit a ball, but well. Can earn a living as a rumba dancer if anything goes wrong with golf.

Slenderer Oliver Plays on Furlough

Corp. Ed Oliver, the stout draftee who is playing in the Goodall on a 4-day furlough. He has taken 3 inches off his waistline since going to Camp Dix. A lusty golfer who drove all the way to the coast, (by car, not brassie) and then had nerves steady enough to permit him to win the Western Open, just before he went into the Army. Has been practicing in a cow pasture near Camp Dix.

Lawson Little, the man who came back. Greatest amateur since Jones. He turned pro and all but disappeared from view. Was believed to be washed up last year, but hammered out a victory in the U. S. open. He shot a 62 to win the Texas open this past winter. He, Sarazen and Oliver will be the lead three-some in the tournament . . . Jug McSpaden, red-hot now. Just won the Big Eight tournament in Boston, against the cream of the crop. He's as good at his putting, which is very warm for May. Seems he just imported a special 19½-ounce putter from England. It is so heavy it cured him of the "yips," the "yips" being nerves which twitch (and make wrists twitch) just before the moment of impact . . . Vic Ghezzi, the Vic Mature of the tournament . . . Horton Smith, the easy-going young executive who'll handle the microphone when the players give their memorable thousand dollar golf lesson before the start of activities tomorrow. Greatest putter in golf history.

Louis and Baer End Heavy Work for Battle

Both Claimed In Top Shape, Set for Kayo

Mike Jacobs Lowers Guess on Gate, but Expects 25,000 Fans And $125,000 Gross

By Al Hailey

The calm that usually precedes the storm struck the camps of Joe Louis and Buddy Baer yesterday as they called a halt to heavy work to await the moment when they step in the ring tomorrow night at Griffith Stadium for the Capital's first heavyweight championship fight.

It's a fight that has the whole town talking, and it is expected to attract the largest crowd to see the Brown Bomber in action since the rumors first started flying that Louis is slipping after Arturo Godoy stayed in a ring with him that February 9 in 1940.

Mike Jacobs, who quit the ticket scalping business to become the high potentate of boxing, yesterday shaved $25,000 off the original prediction of a $150,000 gate and said he expected a gate of $125,000, about 25,000 spectators.

Colored Interest High

The crowd will be the most unique in Washington's boxing history and probably will trot out the strangest assortment of fight fans ever to see a championship battle.

Jacobs' agents have been touring far and wide—even as far south as Georgia—whipping up the colored interest in what will be Joes seventeenth title defense. About 80 per cent of the crowd tomorrow will be out to see their athletic ideal, Joe Louis, go to work on Baer.

Moses' Homer Beats Chisox For A's, 7-6

Lowly Macks Win 4th In Row; Decisive Hit Comes in Ninth With One on and Two Out

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 21.—Wally Moses' ninth inning homer with two out and one mate on base snapped the Chicago White Sox's five-game winning streak today as the Philadelphia Athletics counted their fourth consecutive victory with a 7-6 triumph.

The Sox rookie hurler, Jack Hallett, went into the last inning with a one-run lead. But Dee Miles got a pinch single, and then Moses clouted for the circuit.

The second of Third Baseman Dario Lodigiani's home runs had given the Sox their slim margin. The visitors had trailed until the fifth, when a three-run uprising sent Phil Marchildon from the mound. Frank Hayes, A's catcher, homered to tie the count, however, before the last Lodigiani circuit blow. Bill Knickerbocker and Sam Chapman also garnered home runs.

4-Hit Job Stops Nats For Indians

Cleveland Wins, 4-0; Only 2 Griffs Advance Beyond First Base; Gerry Walker Stars

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Ushered through the first ten innings by Bob Feller's protective fast ball, the Cleveland Indians caught up with the pitching of Ken Chase in the eleventh and made away with a 4-to-0 ball game here yesterday.

Feller kept the Indians in the contest with a four-hit pitching job that permitted only two Nats to advance beyond first base. It was Chase's ill-luck to be matched with Feller on one of the Cleveland ace's better days.

Promoted from the bull pen where he had been sent in semi-disgrace a week ago after a succession of failures as a starting pitched, Chase gave Feller a gallant duel of it until he lost his control, his effectiveness and the ball game in the eleventh. To that point he had been pitching seven-hit ball.

Up Lead to 3 Games

The Indians' eleventh-inning surge against Chase, coincident with Chicago's defeat at Philadelphia earlier in the afternoon, served to lift their league lead over the second-place White Sox to three full games. Feller was recording his eighth victory of the season against two defeats.

The unfortunate Chase, who had been demonstrating a complete reformation by walking only one batter in the first ten innings, put the winning run on base in the eleventh when his first act was to pass Lou Boudreau. Weatherly delivered a long single to left center to move Boudreau to third and when Keltner walked the bases were filled with none out.

Feller Transformed

The 7,500 fans in the stands who had seen Chase emerge from threatening situations in the early innings and were applauding the lefthander all afternoon, groaned when former Nat Gerald Walker drove a fly ball to Chapman to score Boudreau with the winning run. But the Indians weren't through Heath and Bell followed with sin-

Yanks Come From Behind, Beat Tigers

New York Ties Count in Ninth Inning And Wins in Tenth, 5-4, on Walk, Triple

By the Associated Press

New York, May 21.—The New York Yankees surged from behind today to tie the score in the ninth inning and down the Detroit Tigers, 5 to 4, on a walk and Red Rolfe's triple in the tenth.

The Yanks made 14 hits, twice as many as the Tigers, but the first ten of them brought only two runs—one in the first on two singles and a fly and another in the fourth on consecutive doubles by Johnny Sturm and Rolfe.

With Atley Donald pitching good ball, this was enough to cause Schoolboy Rowe's removal in the seventh, but Rookie Pat Mullin hit his second homer of the season with one on in this inning to put Detroit ahead. A double and a single for a run in the eighth produced another run.

Yost 'Seriously Ill' Of Heart Ailment

Nashville, Tenn., May 21 (AP).—Fielding H. Yost, athletic director and former football coach at the University of Michigan, was described today as "seriously ill" at Vanderbilt Hospital. He is under treatment for a heart ailment.

"Mr. Yost is still seriously ill and spent a very restless day," a hospital attendant declared.

It's 2½-to-1 Baer Won't Last Five, Jack Doyle Says

Buddy Baer is an 8-to-1 underdog for his fight tomorrow night with Joe Louis, and in the book of Jack Doyle, Broadway's "wizard of odds," it's 2½-to-1 that Buddy won't last five rounds.

"But there isn't any betting on this thing at all," Doyle informed The Post last night from New York.

The "wise boys" who usually bet on everything from which way the worm will turn to when he will turn are giving the fight the cold shoulder, according to the New York odds-maker.

Bosox Rally to Defeat Browns, 8-6, and Regain Third Place

Pinch-Homer Aids Boston To Victory

Stan Spence Delivers; Ferrell Socks One Of 4 Losers' Homers; Allen Gets Another

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 21.—The lowly St. Louis Browns out-homered the Red Sox sluggers 4-1 today but the latter came from behind to gain an 8-6 victory in the series' opener. That success returned the Sockers into third place over the heads of the unsuccessful Detroit Tigers.

All but one of the Browns' runs were provided by their long-range slugging against starter Mike Ryba, who lasted until the fifth. Johnny Lucadello opened the game by poling a Ryba pitch into the right field stands. In the second inning, with a runner on, Harlond Clift connected for his third homer in two days and Rick Ferrell and Johnny Allen hit consecutive pitches out of the park in the fifth.

The Sockers put on a three-run rally in the seventh, when Johnny Peacock doubled, Stan Spence lashed a pinch-hit homer into the Browns' bullpen in right-center, Lou Finney was passed and Ted Williams and Jimmy Foxx rapped out consecutive singles, to take a 6-5 lead.

Giants Score Over Walters, Reds, 6 to 3

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, May 21 (AP).—The New York Giants turned the tables on the Cincinnati Reds today, scoring three runs off Bucky Walters in the ninth to tie the score and three more in the tenth for a 6-to-3 victory.

Walters allowed only six hits in pitching eight shutout innings, but in the ninth Hank Danning doubled, Bill Jurges singled him home, Joe Orengo doubled Jurges to third and Ken O'Dea delivered a pinch double for the two tying runs.

Burgess Whitehead opened the extra frame with a double that sent Walters to the showers. Then the Giants loaded the bases on Joe Beggs, scored twice on Joe Moore's single and once more on Jurges' squeeze bunt.

The Reds were held to six hits, one of them Harry Craft's homer, and Bob Carpenter took credit for the victory with two innings of hitless relief hurling.

Pirates' Rally Beats Boston In Fifth, 8-4

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, May 21.—Vince DiMaggio's fifth home run of the season started a hitting assault today which brought the Pittsburgh Pirates from far back in the ruck to an 8-4 victory over the Boston Braves. The triumph with Cincinnati's loss put the Bucs in fifth place in the league.

DiMaggio's wallop, a tremendous clout over the left-field wall, came in the third inning and accounted for the first Pirate run off big Jim Tobin. The Braves had jumped off to a 4-0 lead in the first inning by capitalizing on the wildness of Lefty Ken Heintzelman, who gave up four walks and two hits before he was removed with nobody out.

Pearce Named Physical Education Head of High Schools

Central Coach To Succeed Birch Bayh

Texan Started Work Here in 1934 at Eastern; Bayh Accepts Defense Post

Hardy Pearce, Central High School football and track coach and former Hardin-Simmons star athlete, yesterday was named temporarily to succeed Birch E. Bayh as head of the Health and Physical Education Department of the public schools. Bayh who has accepted a similiar position in connection with national defense officially begins a year's leave of absence Sunday. Pearce will take over Monday.

Pearce, a native of Texas, holds college degrees of A. B. from Hardin-Simmons and B. S. and master's in physical education from George Washington, where he transferred from Hardin-Simmons.

The drawling Southerner, a popular figure and a successful coach here, formerly taught academic subjects and coached all sports at Colorado High in Texas. In 1934 he accepted a position on the physical education staff at Eastern High School here and assisted Chief Cawlon as football coach. The following year he shifted over to Central and became head football coach.

In Pearce's six-year reign at the uptown school his football teams have won three interhigh championships while his trackmen have four times won the title.

With Pearce gone, the Central head football coaching job probably will be given to John Jankowski, former Catholic University backfield star, who recently filled a physical education opening at Central.

Gus Lesnevich 5-8 Underdog In 'Title' Bout

New York, May 21.—Anton Christoforidis tonight was the 8 to 5 favorite to defeat Gus Lesnevich of Cliffside, N. J., in a 15-round fight tomorrow night that will help settle ownership of the disputed light-heavyweight crown.

The fight will be held in Madison Square Garden and the winner is slated to meet Jimmy Webb of St. Louis later in the summer for undisputed recognition as light-heavyweight champion.

Although Christoforidis is recognized as champion by the National Boxing Association, the New York State Athletic Commission is conducting its own tournament to decide a successor to Billy Conn when he officially vacates the title. The NBA vacated Conn's title some time ago and made Christoforidis champion last January when he defeated former champion Melio Bettina in Cleveland.

The N. B. A. will recognize tomorrow's fight as a championship affair. New York, however, will postpone recognition until after the winner faces Webb, who won New York's first elimination by knocking out Tommy Tucker here recently.

C. U. Trackmen Beat LaSalle In Dual Meet

Catholic University won 12 first places and shared another in 14 events yesterday to crush LaSalle College of Philadelphia, 84½ to 37½, in their dual track meet at Brookland. Only event in which the Cardinals did not score a point was the pole vault where they had no entries.

Only one meet record was broken and one tied in face of a brisk wind which added to the disadvantages of a slow track. Leo Wall, of Catholic University, lowered his own low hurdles mark from 26.4 to 25.9 after suffering a misfortune in the high hurdles. In the 120-yard timber-topping race the bespectacled Cardinal hurdler was leading by about 6 yards when on the sixth jump his rear leg was struck by the front leg of LaSalle's Earl Swoyer. Wall fell but scrambled up to finish third behind Swoyer and Teammate Hutton.

Johnny Weschler accounted for the tied record by winning the 220-yard dash in 23.1. Vince Campanella, C. U.'s promising freshman sprinter, turned in the good time of 10.1 in taking the 100.

Only double winner of the day was Johnny Corbett, of C. U., who ran to his usual victories in the mile and 2 miles, being clocked in 4:28.5 and 10:08.1.

G. W. Faces G. U. Today

George Washington closes its baseball season and Georgetown plays its next to last game today when the intra-city rivals meet at 2:30 on the Hilltop Medical School field.

The Colonials, with a record of nine victories and the same number of losses, need to win to finish their campaign over the .500 mark. Georgetown will be after its 14th victory in 18 starts. The Hoyas will end their season Tuesday against Navy at Annapolis.

Dick Dieckelman, a stocky youngster who doubles as an outfielder because he swings a heavy bat, probably will be Georgetown's starting pitcher. The Colonials likely will counter with big Frank McGinnis who lately has been having considerable difficulty in getting anybody out.

Attention Va. Eagles

The manager of the Virginia Eagles is requested to call Phil Roach at Lincoln 7127-W, concerning the game with C. S. M. S. Sunday.

It's Open Season On Ball Scorers In Arkansas Loop

By the Associated Press

Hot Spring, Ark., May 21.—The Hot Springs Cotton States League baseball club lost its second official scorer in two weeks today.

Ralph Tayor, Hot Springs newspaperman, announced his resignation as scorer after last night's 44-hit game, in which Texarkana defeated the Bathers, 6 to 15, and 112 batters faced seven pitchers.

Roy Bosson, who sarted the season as scorer, resigned when 68 runs were scored on 80 base hits in two games.

Colonial's Golf Team Tops Terps, Ends Year

George Washington University's golf team concluded its nine-match schedule with a 3½-2½ victory over Maryland's four-man team yesterday at Beaver Dam. It was the fourth victory against five defeats for the Colonial linksmen.

Betsch, Fleming and Kleh of the winners had 75, 76 and 77 in that order while Cook was best for the Terps. Fleming and Betsch put together a best ball 68.

Fleming (G W.) defeated Holmes, 4 and 2; Betsch (G.W.) defeated Harmon, 5 and 4; best ball George Washington, 5 and 4.

Kleh (G.W.) and Liebman (Md.), all even; Cook (Md.) defeated Dillon, 6 and 5; best ball Maryland, 4 and 3.

High School Track Meet Begins Today

Public high school trackmen of Washington move into the first day of their forty-fourth annual interhigh track meet at 3:30 today, and from all indications a new champion may be crowned after the two-day event at Central's newly-sodden stadium.

Short on talent in many events and without an outstanding performer in any, Central's defending champions have a fighting chance and no more. Tech, with its brilliant Eddie Barham a cinch to win two, three or even four first places, will be the favorite. Eastern is the only other school conceded even a vague chance.

Trials will be the order of the day today, though marks attained in the shot, discus, javeline and broad jump will be considered in determining eventual winners. Finals in these along with eight track and two other field events will be staged tomorrow, starting at 3:30.

Team scores will be decided on a 5-4-3-2-1 basis on the first five places.

A single record appears certain of going by the board, that in the high jump. On several occasions already this year Tech's Barham has soared well over the 6-feet 1 3-16-inch mark set by himself last year. His best effort was a dazzling 6-foot-5 last Friday in the "C" Club meet, coming with slightly more than 2 inches of the world's scholastic mark.

Last of the Bomber's Title Fights

Lou Nova Gives Joe Louis A Whale-of-a-Fight, but Loses

(This is the last of a series of four articles by Bob Considine, International News Service sports writer, presenting a ringside preview of Joe Louis' probable performances against the four challengers who will attempt to lift the Brown Bomber's title during the coming summer.)

By Bob Considine.

New York, May 21.—Joe Louis completes the busiest year of his boxing career in September when, if things go as we expect them to go in the fights against Buddy Baer, Billy Conn and Abe Simon, Joe will defend his title against the bizarre Lou Nova.

We foresee this is the strangest fight of Joe's life. For Joe will be fighting more than a durable, clumsy thumper who can "take it" better than any fighter in the game today—including Louis. Joe will be fighting Nova, plus Yoga. The combination inevitably will disturb the champ. But not quite enough to cause Joe to bite the dust.

Yoga, in case you have not heard, is an ancient Hindu belief which the college-bred Nova has embraced. It preaches, among many other things, that imperviousness to pain can be achieved by the proper application of self-hypnosis before the pain is inflicted. In both fights against Max Baer, Nova gave an eerie demonstration of his faith in these teachings. He went into what approximates a trance before each engagement, and in each fight he took punches which seemingly would have killed a horse. Yet a sway against the ropes, in the second Baer fight, is the only hint Nova gave as to the fearsome power of Max's round-hand clouts.

We see this Yoga belief, as sincere as it is with Nova, a great sales point for the fight. We don't think that 50,000 persons and $500,000 is to much to expect of the Louis-Nova match.. Another boon for the match is that Louis will not have fought for more than two months when he faces Nova. Jack Dempsey once made news by laying off three years, but Louis, the only heavyweight champion who ever kept his promise about being a fighting champion, will make news in 1941 by laying off for two months.

We think the Leouis-Nova fight will go the distance. We think that Louis will be cut for the first time in his career, because in his patient, plodding and seemingly powerless way, Nova can inflict tremendous damage on an oppoinent over a period of 10 or 15 rounds. He butchered Baer and Tommy Farr much worse than Louis did. We think he'll go the route because he can take a punch, because he can box very nicely, and because his ability as a Yogi enables him to become insensate to the grave doubts and preliminary aches which beset most of Louis' opponents.

We think Louis will win because he is certain to pile up a margin with his quick, accurate jab. It is faster and cleaner than Nova's. We see Nova going down a number of times, but getting up and fighting back. Nova is not hard to hit, and anyone Joe can hit he'll knock down. We think Lou will temper his disdain for Louis with a touch of discretion. We see him sticking Louis a lot with that heavy, soggy jab that, surprisingly enough, closes eyes and cuts skin. We see him giving the gamest demonstration any fighter ever gave against Louis—borne up as he will be by his own Joe Grimmish ability to "take it" and the strange and completely genuine trance into which we are positive he goes before a fight. We see him giving back a lot of punishment to Louis, too. But Joe's speed and slightly better defense will provide the difference between the two men.

Tech Beaten By G. W. High

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Va., May 21.—McKinley Tech's nine suffered its second consecutive loss at the hands of Northern Virginia opposition here this afternoon, as George Washington High pounded out a 17-12 victory in a free-hitting, loosely played game. The win boosted the Presidents' record to an even .500, with six victories and as many losses.

The Presidents blasted Brewer from the mound with an eight-run attack in the fourth, and never trailed thereafter. The winners drove out 15 hits, while Tech was credited with 7 safeties, including home runs by Keithley and Webb.

Higgins, Faltz and Beach each drove out three hits for the winners, while Green, of Tech, also had three for four. Keithley added a triple to his homer, to take extra-base honors.

Royal Business Captures Charles Town Racing Feature

Sam Palumbo Rides Victor; Blabah 2d

Veteran Mare Comes From Last Position For First Victory; Pays $9.20 Price

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., May 21.—With a smashing effort, seldom equaled by any horse at this track, Capt. Ewart Johnston's Royal Businss came through with her first victory of the year. The race was the day's feature, named the Retreat for the ancestral farm of Leeds K. Riley, popular secretary of the local jockey club. The combination of Royal Business and Jockey Sammy Palumbo, long rated No. 1 on the Charles Town whip parade, was at its best. The 6-year-old mare and the veteran rider came from last position in a field of eight to win by a half length.

O. S. Jennings' Blablah was second and three lengths ahead of the favored The Fop, which proved something of a flop in the test of six and a half furlongs. The public choice used up his energy before he was put in the starting gate by fighting with the outrider, his jockey and an assistant starter.

Pays $9.20

Beaten off recently on a heavy track, Royal Business found the lightning fast oval to her liking. The crowd of 7,000 gave her only lukewarm support in the mutuel machines and she paid $9.20 mutuel. As a time proposition, the race was not extraordinary. The veteran mare was clocked in 1:20 2-5 a fraction over the time recorded by Indignation in winning the fourth event on the card.

Royal Business pulled a "Whirlaway" on the field. Palumbo went away from the gate in last place and was steadying his mount. Blablah took the lead at once and drew out on Gliter Girl and Mach Point. The Fob was up in the pack at this stage.

On the backstretch, Palumbo put Royal Business to a hand drive. He lacked racing room on the inside, but spotted an opening and shot through. The mare picked up horse after horse and at the far turn was up there with Blablah, Glitter Girl and The Fop.

Pace Too Hot

Palumbo then guided out and set sail. Only Blablah had the mare topped at the stretch bend. Palumbo increased the cadence of his ride and Royal Business answered with stamina that Blablah could not withstand.

Well played horses figured in a $30.80 pay off in the daily double. Jockey Patsy Grant started the ball rolling with a victory on Vendor's Lien, a $4.40 favorite in the second race. Jockey Johnny Shanks completed the transaction by scoring with Balkanese, an $8.40 shot, in the third event.

HAPPY SIS, away slowly, was hard ridden and swerved in front of FUSIONETTE, for which she was disqualified. Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

Jockey Martin Bletzacker, called "Blitz" hereabouts, starts a five-day suspension for rough riding. He is going to his home in Somerset, Ohio, for a visit. Remember last winter when I wrote about the "retirement" of Jockey Johnny Shanks and I said he would be back in the saddle? Well, he is and now plans to go to Wheeling. Everything was quiet and peaceful until yesterday when Peg Hanna showed up. Trainer Don Yates reports that Mrs. Veader Leonard has leased Apprentice Jockey Herb Claggett for the Delaware meeting. Mrs. Leonard has Happy Lark, Money Muddle, Unknown Land and Sizzling Sue. John F. Whitney, secretary of the Horsemen's Guild, has been inducted into the United States Army. That body holds a meeting tomorrow night at 8:30 at the Thomas Jefferson Hotel. Jockey J. Hernandez was absolved of blame for the foul that resulted in the disqualification from third money of Happy Sis in yesterday's first race. Happy Sis swerved in front of Fusionette. The stewards made their own "objection" in this case. Mickey McGuire left yesterday to cover for the Form at Wheeling. Charles F. has been sent back to the farm. He trailed two fields here and Trainer C. H. James decided he is not fit for racing. James also is training for the Bennings Stable. E. B. Lee claimed Vendor's Lien out of the second race for $800. The 5-year-old won in the colors of G. G. Waugh, jr. Trainer George Cook is building a new house on his farm near Clarksville, Md., He will take several horses to Delaware, for A. C. Paul. I wish somebody would change the positions of those flamingoes in the infield here. They are beginning to haunt me. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—MALVOIS ran a good race at Pimlico and gets in this field with a feather assignment. PRISON SHIP is far down the list and a doubtful starter, but will be close if in action. COQ ALANE can better that last.

Second race—ROMNEY ROYAL is the speed of this party and needs only to run his race. Likes the route and is fit. CONNAMISTA has speed and belongs with these. CHIEF HOLLIS and IVONIA are good, but are far down the line.

Third race—BABY MOWLEE had poor racing luck in that last. With clear sailing, this one could take it all. BUTCHER BOY is at tops and will be close. MR. JIM raced well on the milers and is worthy of consideration.

Fourth race—LENA GIRL gets my call in this sprint. She has a class edge on the eligibles. EMMA H. showed speed at Pimlico and is a threat. SMALL CHANGE for the minor award.

Fifth race—HI-BLAZE is the speed of this party and should turn back this field. LIKLY LAD came back after being on the shelf and ran a good race. CAT'S CRADLE for the show end.

Sixth race—ALLEN CAID gets the good post position on the rail for this distance test, and I'm going to string along. PART ONE likes the route and will be a keen factor. LAFITOFF closed flying last out.

Seventh race—EASTER HOLIDAY, a winner at the meeting, promises to gather another set of brackets in this field. WINDSOR CHIEF may surprise the talent even at this long route. MAMIE'S LAD to take care of the others.

Eighth race—GIGGLE LEE had trouble leaving the gate last out and promises to make amends for that defeat. MOON HARVEST probably needed that last KISSIN KID should fill out the money circle.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take CLOCKS, PANDORAMINT and TROSTAR.

Best bet—Malvois.

50 Ship Loss Seen Hurting Oil Industry

By the Associated Press

New York, May 21.—H. F. Sinclair, chairman of the executive committee of Consolidated Oil Corp., told stockholders at the annual meeting today that the lack of the 50 ships the industry has been called upon to furnish to the Federal Government would affect transportation to the extend of about 200,000 barrels of petroleum products daily moving from Gulf ports to the Atlantic Seaboard.

"It is predicted the Government will ask for adidtional ships, all of which is going to upset the regular normal operations of the oil industry. We hope that we will be able to replace that transportation in some other manner."

Sinclair Foresees Return to Bicycle

New York, May 21 (AP).—If you believe in the theory of protection against any and all eventualities—better get yourself a bicycle. Possibility that the two-wheelers may have to be counted on for a lot of local transportation was envisaged today by Harry F. Sinclair, oil executive, who told the stockholders of the Consolidated Oil Corporation:

"I trust you will not complain and will bear with us if some day it is necessary for you to go about your pleasures on a bicycle rather than in an automobile. The situation is very serious."

Sinclair said he was thinking about the danger of an acute shortage of gasoline and other oil products due to diversion of tankers to the service of Great Britain.

(Several projects for oil and gasoline pipelines are known to be under consideration by major oil companies to bring supplies from the Gulf to industrial centers in the east and south. A bill was introduced into Congress yesterday with Presidential backing to permit Government aid for such projects and to permit direct Government building if necesary for national defense.)

Of the company's business, Sinclair said:

"It is my opinion that earnings are going to increase. At least, they will not be as bad, I hope, as last year.

"But I have a mesage on my desk inviting me to Washington to talk with Leon Henderson who has charge of prices there. Every morning we get up there is something new to look after. You never know what is going to happen the next morning. The management of the company can only do its best."

Orders Placed for Pipe

New York, May 21 (AP).—Orders have been placed for 120,600 tons of pipe for the proposed gasoline pipe line from Baton Rouge, La., to Greensboro, N. C., it was learned today.

Although the $15,000,000 line, planned by Plantation Pipe Line Co., has been held up by legal snarls as Southern railroads refused rights of way to cross their tracks, the pipe line concern decided "to take a chance on ordering materials," an official said, after introduction yesterday of the Cole bill in the House of Representatives at Washington.

The bill would permit oil companies to acquire, with Government aid, any land and rights of way necessary for construction of pipe lines vital to national defense.

Crude Prices Increased

Tulsa, Okla., May 21 (AP).—Higher prices for crude oil in seven states buoyed the petroleum industry today as it sought to cope with a threatened bottleneck in the transportation of oil from the Gulf Coast to the Atlantic seaboard.

Several companies boosted crude oil prices 10 cents a barrel in Oklahoma, Texas, Illinois, Wyoming, Kansas, New Mexico, and Louisiana, and others were expected to follow.

The defense program caused the transportation problem, and may aid in producing the cure—new pipe lines.

Humble Boosts Prices

Houston, Tex., May 21 (AP).—Humble Oil & Refining Co. announced today a 10-cent a barrel increase for all crude oil it purchases in Texas and New Mexico, with the exception of two fields.

Sohio Prices Up

Cleveland, May 21 (AP).—Sohio Corporation, subsidiary of Standard Oil Co. of Ohio, announced today an increase of 10 cents a barrel in its posted well price for crude oil purchased in Illinois, Indiana and Kentucky.

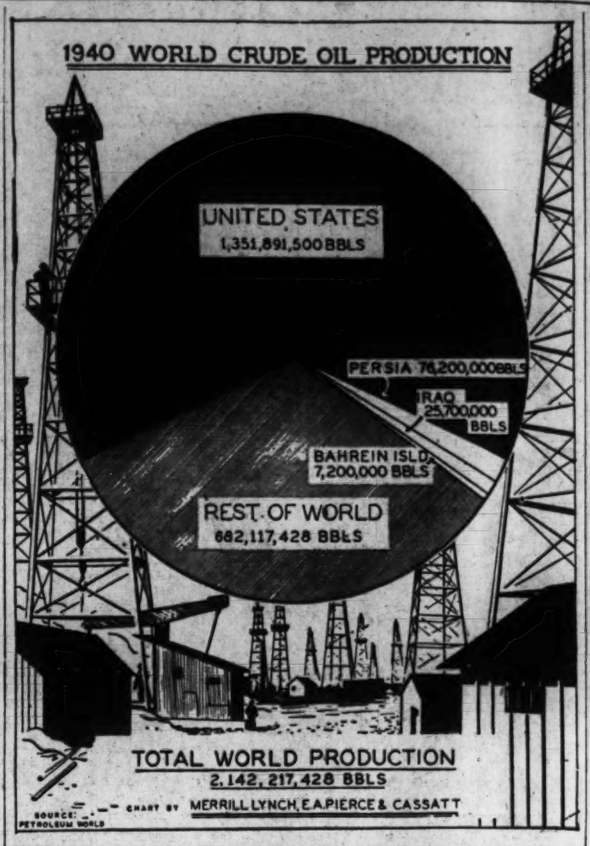
Eastman Increases Wages 10 Per Cent

Rochester, N. Y., May 21 (AP).—The Eastman Kodak Co. announced today a wage increase of "approximately 10 per cent" for plant and office employes earning up to $3,000 a year, adding an estimated $4,000,000 to the annual pay roll. It becomes effective next week.

The company did not estimate the number of employes affected, although it said a "great majority" reside here where 19,000 are on the pay roll. There is no basic wage scale, each department operating on its own budget.



Struggle With Totalitarianism Lasting 5 or More Years Seen

By the Associated Press

New York, May 21.—Philip D. Reed, chairman of the General Electric Co. and senior consultant of the Federal Priorities Division, predicted tonight a struggle with totalitarianism lasting "five, perhaps more, years during which prime emphasis will be placed on the production of military products and devices."

In a speech prepared for the annual convention of the National Industrial Conference Board, Reed urged manufacturers to adjust themselves to a long period of enormous production for defense "and a consequent shortage, rationing and allocation of strategic materials."

Other speakers listed were Col. William J. Donovan, Presidential representative in Europe recently; Sidney Hillman, associate director of the Office of Production Management, and Dr. Virgil Jordan, president of the National Industrial Conference Board, a private research organization.

Reed told the industrialists the sooner necessity for the adjustment to defense production was faced, the sooner would the problem of production and distribution for civilian needs, alongside an all out defense effort, be met.

Sees Serious Restrictions

"If you accept, as I do," he said, "the conclusion that whatever happens in Europe and the Far East in 1941, we have entered a long period of large scale armament production and that the manufacture of numerous peacetime products will be subject to serious restrictions, it follows that many manufacturers now engaged in making civilian products will do well to consider their situations and explore the possibility of converting part or all of their operations to defense manufacture."

As to postwar conditions and problems, Reed said he anticipated: 1, a speedup of the twentieth century trend toward economic integration—an industry-wide planning under government supervision; 2, collective bargaining between nation-wide labor organizations and industry-wide associations of employers; 3, greater centralized control of money and credit; 4, government spending for previously planned public works "in order to cushion the devastating effect of an almost vertically declining demand for armaments, and, 5, "a deep determiniation to take whatever steps are necessary, however drastic, to avoid a recurrence of mass unemployment."

Reed said: "The dangers and disadvantages of totalitarianism will be better understood as the war against the Axis powers proceeds and, while the concept of the normal functions of Democratic governmnet will be substantially enlarged, I believe that labor, agriculture and busines will solidly unite in preserving some substantial part of the freedom of action and of opportunity that are the backbone of our enterprise system."

Broad Flow of Private Capital

He said that upon whether under these conditions and with profit margins generally lower confidence would be sturdy enough to create a broad flow of private capital into new and existing enterprises depended further and more drastic experiments in government borrowing and spending.

Jordan commented in a prepared address that Americas "sense that they stand in the same profound peril as the people of the French Republic two years ago, and the people of the British Emipre today."

"The people of Britain may soon be beaten or absorbed into submission and their empire broken," he said.

F. W. Lovejoy, chairman of the board of the Eastman Kodak Co., was elected chairman of the National Industrial Conference Board for 1941-42, succeeding David M. Goodrich, chairman of the B. F. Goodrich Co.

New vice chairman, elected for one year, were: Neal Dow Becker, president of the Intertype Corp.; W. Gibson Carey, jr., president of Yale & Towne Manufacturing Co.; Irenee duPont, of E. I. duPont de Nemours; John Wycoff Mettler, president of the Interwoven Stocking Co., and Langbourne W. Williams, jr., president of Freeport Sulphur Co.

Fred I. Kent, a director of the Bankers Trust Co., was reelected treasurer and Jordan was reelected president and chief executive officer.

Record Ore Consumption

Cleveland, May 21 (AP).—Consumption of Lake Superior iron ore during April totaled 5,802,068 gross tons—a new record for the month, the Lake Superior Iron Ore Association reported today.

Reynolds to Buy 6,000,000 Tons Of Dutch Bauxite

New York, May 21 (AP).—The Reynolds Metals Co. announced today it had contracted for 6,000,000 tons of high-grade aluminum ore from Dutch interests in Surinam (Dutch Guiana), South America.

The 12-year contract for the ore, bauxite, was signed by R. S. Reynolds, company president, and J. van den Broek, managing director of N. V. Billiton Maatschappij, owner of the aluminum properties.

Deliveries from the South American company, 2,500 miles from American gulf ports and closest source of foreign bauxite, will start January 1, Reynolds said.

Reynolds is ready to put into operation an alumina plant at Lister, Ala., near Muscle Shoals, for refining bauxite. The Lister plant is expected to reach capacity production of 40,000,000 pounds annually of pure aluminum in July.

The company said a plant at Longview, Wash., would be in operation late in August and should reach capacity production of 60,000,000 pounds a year by October 15.

Steel Subsidiaries Work at Capacity

New York, May 21 (AP).—Operating subsidiaries of United States Steel Corporation are working at 100 per cent of capacity.

Only once before, for a two-week period ended January 27, this year, has the steel giant run plants at full rated capacity.

Corporation officials pointed out that plants were running full blast in an attempt to compensate as far as possible for the slowdown which occurred for lack of fuel as a result of the recent soft coal stoppage.

The corporation's operating rate has risen about 5½ points in the past week and 8 points from the 92 per cent of capacity two weeks ago, which was the low mark during the coal shortage.

It was learned the plants of Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, principal operating subsidiary, ran at 105 per cent of capacity in the past week, and the schedule for this week was set at between 103 and 104.

Koppers Gets Contract For 21 Coke Ovens

Pittsburgh, May 21. (AP).—The Philadelphia Electric Co. has awarded a contract for construction of 21 coke ovens at its by-products coke plant at Chester, Pa., to the Koppers Co., Joseph Becker, vice president of Koppers, announced today.

The battery of ovens, of the Koppers-Becker underjet type, will have a total coal carbonizing capacity of 142,000 tons a year. Work will start immediately and the ovens will be completed next April. The cost was not disclosed.

Baldwin Orders Gain $40,000,000 in Quarter

Philadelphia, May 21 (AP).—Charles E. Brinley, president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, announced today the dollar value of orders received in April by the Baldwin Locomotive Works and subsidiaries, including the Midvale company, was $10,378,217, as compared with $3,835,411 for April, 1940.

The month's bookings brought the total for the consolidated group for the four months of 1941 to $51,247,369, as compared with $10,778,264 in the same period of 1940.

J. P. Morgan & Co. Declares Dividend

New York, May 21 (AP).—Directors of J. P. Morgan and Co., Inc., a trust company organized slightly more than a year ago when the original private banking house dissolved its partnership, today declared a dividend of $1 per share payable June 15 to stockholders of record June 2. It was the first dividend of the corporation.

A. T. & T. Plans $234,000,000 Of Debentures

By the Associated Press

New York, May 21. — Largest single borrowing in the 56-year history of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., $234,000,000 in convertible debentures, was recommended today by its directors, primarily to finance new construction.

The issue would be offered to stockholders at face amount on the basis of their holdings at $100 value for each eight shares of stock if approved at a special meeting June 25 when stockholders of record May 29 may vote.

The customary quarterly dividend of $2.25 a share, payable July 15 to stockholders of record June 16, was declared, the same $9 annual rate paid since 1922.

"Other corporate purposes" mentioned by President Walter S. Gifford in his announcement were believed by some financial circles to include redemption of $94,694,000 in 5½ per cent sinking fund debentures due in 1943.

Convertible From Mach 1, 1942

The directors suggested that the debentures be dated September 1, 1941, bear interest of between 2 and 3 per cent and mature from September 1, 1949, to September 1, 1956.

They would be convertible from about March 1, 1942, at the rate of one share of capital stock for each $100 value held, plus a cash differential to make up the conversion price, limited at $150 a share.

Redemption would be on 30 days notice and 30 days after the first conversion at up to 107 per cent of principal.

If issued, the debentures would be the first public offering of the company since 1936, although last December it placed privately with insurance companies $140,000,000 in 30 year 2¾ per cent debentures.

Other funded debt includes $175,000,000 in 25 year 3¼s of 1961, $160,000,000 in 30 year 3¼s of 1966, while obligations of subsidiaries consolidated total $560,568,000.

Plant Valued at $4,747,674,470

Trustees of pension funds hold $6,786,569 in company demand and one year 4 per cent notes and $97,044,388 in subsidiaries' notes.

Total plant value at the end of 1940 was estimated at $4,747,674,470.

Gifford last month told stockholders the Bell System expected to spend $400,000,000 for new construction during 1941, an outlay $110,000,000 greater than the 1939 figure.

Among the larger projects under way is the laying of an underground transcontinental telephone cable, expected to be completed early in 1942, which will provide in conjunction with other additions 36 new circuits to the Pacific Coast.

New wire from Oklahoma City to Albuquerque, N. Mex., will provide 32 more circuits which, with the Omaha cable, will increase by one-third the existing 200 coast-to-coast wires.

Parley Scheduled On Fuel Oil Prices

By the Associated Press

Complaints of recent increases in fuel oil prices have led to a conference to be held here tomorrow by the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply with representatives of the industry, it was learned.

The conference, which officials described as "exploratory," will be conducted by Quinn Shaughnessy, former Securities Commission official, who recently joined the OPA as petroleum expert.

What companies will be represented at the conference was not disclosed here, and officials said it was unlikely that any announcement would be made after the meeting. Its purpose, they said, was merely to discuss the oil price situation.

New Steel Orders Still Exceed Output

New York, May 21 (AP).—New steel orders in the aggregate have been declining, but they are still greater in volume than shipments, Iron Age said today in its weekly survey.

Except for defense work, mills are placing restrictions on orders and are turning down "a great many."

"Mandatory priorities for plates and shapes," the survey continued, "probably will be next in line in the tightening control over steel supplies by Government agencies."

Oils Reach New 1941 Highs as Stocks Score Gains for Fifth Straight Session

New York, May 21.—Stock prices shoved ahead again today behind a mounting advance detail of oils which reached new 1941 summits.

A majority of the industrials traded shared in the advance, although few rises ranged abpve major fractions.

In the fifth successive session without a decline, the Associated Press average of 60 selected stocks rose .1 of a point to 40.2 Turnover of 544,200 shares was the largest in two weeks and compared with 471,050 yesterday when the market went suddenly bullish in the final minutes of trade.

Today's early activities imitated, on a smaller scale, the late doings of the previous session but the buying flurry lapsed by degrees as the day progressed with most advances fairly well maintained.

Oils emerged as the stellar performers on the basis of increased petroleum and gasoline prices in many sections of the country and predictions of likely East Coast motor fuel shortages due to the transfer of ocean tankers to transatlantic runs.

New highs were established in this connection, for stock of Consolidated Oil, Ohio Oil, Standard Oil of Ohio and Mid-Continental Petroleum.

American Telephone rose more than a point at one time—and closed ⅞ point ahead—on announcement of a proposed $234,000,000 funding operation to permit further expansion. Western Union set a new high mark for the year.

Other gainers included Yellow Truck, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, J. I. Case, Douglas, Dupont, Savage Arms, Allis Chalmers, Philip Morris, Reynolds Metals, Phelps Dodge and Johns-Manville.

In the curb, where transactions totaled 78,000 shares compared with 100,000 yesterday, leading risers were Le Tourneau, Gulf Oil, Humble Oil, Pittsburgh Plate Glass and Brewster Aeronautical.

Bonds were given a helping hand by the rallying stock market today and a fair number of speculative loans ended the session with modest gains.

A wider trading interest developed in the recently inactive United States Governments on word from Washington the treasury quarterly financing operation would involve cash borrowing of $600,000,000. This was somewhat less than had been expected.

Some short term treasuries moved up around 1-16. Over-the-counter dealings were broader, with a fair demand reported for the short terms, particularly the 3¼s of 1941. The long term treasuries tended to work slightly lower.

Improvement in a majority of the corporates seemed closely connected with the further modest uplift in shares. Walworth 4s closed at 81, up 1; Western Union 5s of 1960 at 82, up ½; Nickel Plate 4½s at 63, up ⅜; M-K-T "A" 5s of 1962 at 31¼, up ⅝; Chesapeake & Ohio 3½s at 104, up ½.

American & Foreign Power 5s dropped a point on a fairly large turnover and Alleghany Corporation 5s of 1949 showed a similar loss on small dealings.

Some issues of American Telephone recorded minor declines coincident with the company's announcement of plans for $234,000,000 of new debentures financing.

Improvement was general in prices of leading foreign bonds. Japan 5½s rose 2½ and Norway 4s gained 2. Obligations of Panama, Germany and Canada also traded at higher levels.

Transactions totaled $6,380,800 face value against $6,998,400 Tuesday.

Viscose Syndicate Will Offer Stock To Public Monday

New York, May 21 (AP).—Financial circles heard today that the syndicate which bought the American Viscose Corporation from British interests planned to offer the new stock to the public next Monday through an organization of 600 to 700 dealers throughout the country.

Registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission by the group headed by Morgan Stanley & Co. were 228,480 shares of 5 per cent cumulative preferred and 1,568,000 shares of common.

The Viscose Co., one of the world's largest manufacturers of rayon, was taken over by the British government and sold to the American bankers for $40,000,000 and other considerations March 16.

It has plants at Front Royal and Roanoke, Va.; Nitro and Parkersburg, W. Va., and Lewistown, Marcus Hook and Meadville, Pa.

Directors of the company today declared a dividend of 50 cents a common share and $1.25 on preferred stock, payable August 1 to stockholders of record July 15. It reported 1,720,442 common and 250,693 preferred shares outstanding of the recapitalized shares.

Sears Campaigns For Cotton Week

The biggest drive to stimulate the consumption of cotton ever undertaken by Sears, Roebuck & Co. has been launched by the firm's ten mail order plants and 595 retail stores, W. M. Johansen, Sears' local group manager, announced yesterday.

The company is completing mailing of 11,000,000 midseason salesbooks for National Cotton Week, May 16 to 23. Special attention is called to a large number of items in which cotton is used. The retail stores, cooperating with the Institute of Distribution, the Cotton Consumption Council and the Cotton Textile Institute, are engaged in a vigorous Cotton Week campaign of merchandising, advertising and display. Commenting on Sears' drive, Johansen said:

"A study showed that the amount of cotton consumed in Sears' merchandise was doubled in the last decade. It was estimated that 123,500,000 pounds, or 247,000 bales, of cotton in the form of Sears' goods were sold by the company in 1940. Merchandise statisticians believe that this figure will rise to approximately 284,000 bales in 1941. Twenty-six different merchandise departments carry items which contain cotton in varying percentages; the items range all the way from automobile tires to evening gowns."

Leading Refiners Cut Prices of Sugar

New York, May 21 (AP).—Leading refiners announced today a reduction in refined sugar prices from 5.10 cents to 4.95 cents a pound for prompt shipment.

This is the first reduction in the refined price in the Eastern market since March 24 and follows unsettlement in Southern areas marked by reports of sales below the official price basis.

While the announcements generally specified orders would be accepted up to the close of business Thursday, May 22, for shipment until June 6, and also subject to immediate withdrawal, one large refiner did not specifically limit the offer to the close of business Thursday.

Sugar Drops, Other Staples Continue Up

By the Associated Press

Commodities continued in their upward spiral yesterday and some of the new price gains were steep. There was one comforting development, however, for the American housewife who has been surveying the soaring quotations of foods with increasing apprehension—the wholesale price of refined sugar in Atlantic Seaboard territory was dropped to 4.95 cents a pound from 5.10 cents.

Some futures markets hit a fast pace as they extended the precipitant and almost unbroken rise since passage of the lend-lease bill in early March.

In New York Santos coffee futures pushed up .10 to .23 of a cent a pound; cottonseed oil, up .06 to .08 of a cent; wool tops, up .1 to .2 of a cent; hides, up .22 to .31 of a cent; silk, up ½ to 2 cents; cotton, up 20 to 45 cents a bale.

Domestic raw sugar futures sold moderately lower with the cut in refined. Rubber, down sharply in recent sessions, steadied in a mixed range.

Chicago wheat finished with gains of ⅜ to ⅝ of a cent a bushel. Corn was ¾ to ⅞ higher. Strength of grains was helped by fresh advances in soybeans and lard.

Power Output Gains .3 Per Cent

New York, May 21 (AP).—Electric power output for the week ended May 17 reached a new high since late March, at 2,799,722,000 kilowatthours, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

This was a rise of .3 per cent over the previous week's 2,791,609,000 kilowatthours, and an increase of 15.6 per cent over the 2,422,212,000 kilowatt hours recorded for the same week last year.

Showing a slightly more than seasonal gain, the week's outturn lifted the Associated Press index of power production to a new 1941 high at 143.3 compared with the previous week's 143.2 and last year's 122.9. The index, based on 1929-30 as 100, is adjusted for seasonal and long-term trend.

By the Associated Press

The Bureau of Mines yesterday forecast the June market demand for domestic crude oil at 114,900,000 barrels, or 3,830,000 barrels daily.

This was 30,300 barrels greater than the estimated demand for May and 3 per cent above the actual demand for June, 1940.

Louis, Baer Poised for Title Fight

and in the corridors of the Capital—the fight was the subject. In the ringside tomorrow night Senators, Congressmen, defense big-wigs and high Government officials will rub elbows with the fight mob which invariably follows Jacobs fight carnivals.

Nova Will Attend

Ray Carlen and his Yoga disciple, Lou Nova; Johnny Ray and his boy, Billy Conn, and numerous other fighters and managers who are yearning for a shot at Louis' crown will be at the ringside.

As Louis and Baer wound up training grinds yesterday before sweltering throngs at Riverside and Olney, Md., both camps expressed complete satisfaction with their fighter's condition and mental attitude.

Press Club Host To Sports Writers

The National Press Club will throw open its rooms to visiting sports writers who are coming to Washington tomorrow to cover the Joe Louis-Buddy Baer heavyweight championship fight, Dick Randall, Chicago Times correspondent and member of the Press Club guest committee, announced.

Randall last night said the Press Club was trying to locate the whereabouts of sports writers already in town and that guest cards probably will be made available at the Raleigh Hotel, where Mike Jacobs has set up headquarters.

Kavakos Grill 16-5 Victors Over Redskins

Clem Stralka's Service Station Redskins were buried under a barrage of hits last night at Washington Softball Stadium as Kavakos Grill, Capital City League leader, punched out a 16-5 victory and retained undefeated record. A nine-run third-inning rally turned the trick. Three home runs, by Kimmell, Lamb and Quill, featured.

In the regular Capital City League game, Cy Stewart hurled four-hit ball to blank May Hardware Co. ten, 6-0. Collins and DeCarlo hit homers, fourth of the year for DeCarlo.

Sholl's Cafeteria girls turned back M. P. M. Market lassies, 5-4, in the opener of the triple-header, scoring all runs in the first inning. M. P. M. Market tallied twice in the first and twice more in the second.

Prince George Seeks

The Prince George Tigers, undefeated in five starts, want to book a double header for Sunday, June 1, with any unlimited team that has a diamond. For information call Manager Bill James at Bowie 2231.

gles, each of which produced a run, and when Chase issued his third pass of the inning to fill the bases for a second time, Bill Zuber got the pitching job. Desautels got the fourth run of the inning home with a squeeze bunt.

It was Feller's first start in Griffith Stadium since 1939, and Washington fans saw him as transformed pitcher scarcely resembling the wild, hurried work of his earlier days. They saw him cautious to the extent of being dilatory and despite the scoreless battle the first nine innings consumed two hours and 20 minutes. After the first inning, Feller walked only one batter.

Roger Cramer collected two of the four hits Feller allowed, even as he made two of the Nats' hits on the day earlier in the month when Feller held the Nats to three blows in Cleveland. Cramer's hits were, in fact, the only untained blows permitted yesterday by Feller. Jake Early beat out an infield single and a double by Jimmy Bloodworth was a pop fly which Left-Fielder Gee Walker failed to reach.

Chase turned in a heroic sort of performance. In the opening inning he held the Indians scoreless despite Weatherly's triple with only one out, and he averted damage at other points in the contest. The first man to face him in the fourth, fifth and sixth innings reached base.

Tempers were short at one point in the proceedings, when Cleveland Outfielder Jeff Heath advanced toward Chase from the batters' box after a Chase fast ball had almost grazed his chin. Words passed between batter and pitcher, and a soft-drink bottle came hurtling out of the stands onto the diamond, but umpires and teammates shooed Chase and Heath back to their positions.

Grin and Bear It — By Lichty

"I don't know why I always go to weddings. I never seem to be able to find my shoes again!"

As varied a group of men as ever made up a baseball team are to be the guests tonight on Parks Johnson's and Wally Butterworth's "Vox Pop" show over WJSV and the Columbia network at 6:30 p. m.

There seem to be some slight doubt about the baseball team being an orthodox one. In the first place there seem to be only six members on hand. But then there are scoffers who say that, even if there were nine, there's much doubt about it's being a baseball team anyhow.

It's Lowell Thomas' soft ball squad, which affectionately he has christened "The Nine Old Men." Included, besides Lowell himself, will be Homer Croy, the author, movie scenarist and newspaper columnist; Paul Webb, known to the country for his famous "mountain boy" cartoons in Esquire and in various newspapers; Ted Shane, another author and humorist, whose works appear often in popular magazines; Hamilton Fish, who is no less than "Ham" Fish, the United States Congressman, and Eddie Eagan, the former amateur lightweight boxing champion, who—yes, it must be confessed—is also an author.

Eagan, by a recent coincidence—name of Hess—has been pretty widely in the news the past few days. For Eagan is the one man in the United States who can tell you all about the Duke of Hamilton, on whose estate Hess landed in Scotland.

Contract Bridge

A British expert reveals that his people still manage to enjoy their favorite relaxation. "In spite of the efforts which are being made by the enemy to interfere with the normal lift of the nation," he writes, "bridge is still being played largely, and freak hands appear to have been dealt with unusual frequency recently."

A resident of Midhurst, England, expects to see a deal like this only once in a lifetime. He held these cards:

♠ None
♡ A K Q J 7 5
◇ A K Q J 9 8 3
♣ None

His partner had the ten of diamonds and ten of hearts, and the grand-slam contract was lay-down.

If the preceding hand is unusual, then the one shown in today's box is truly amazing. Not one, but all four players held two-suiters.

Today's Hand

Neither Side Vulnerable
NORTH DEALER

	♠ None ♡ A J 8 7 6 5 2 ◇ K Q 10 9 4 2 ♣ None
♠ Q 9 8 7 6 3 2 ♡ None ◇ None ♣ A J 10 6 4 3	WEST NORTH EAST SOUTH	♠ A K J 10 5 4 ♡ None ◇ None ♣ K Q 9 8 7 5 2
	♠ None ♡ K Q 10 9 4 3 ◇ A J 8 7 6 5 3 ♣ None

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
3 ♡	3 ♠	6 ♡	6 ♠
Pass	Pass	7 ♡	7 ♠
Pass	Pass	Dble.	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: A ◇.

The British writer estimates the mathematical odds against a 7-6 division of a suit as about 10,000 to 1, and he calls the odds against all four suits being divided this way "stupendous." That the partners' hands would match each other is nothing short of a miracle. The deal was played at Stoke-on-Trent.

Accused Blonde Slayer Weeps as Policewoman Quotes Her as Saying She Still Loved Victim

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 21.—Blond Ruth Steadman surrendered to emotion for the first time today in her trial for the murder of Robert Emery and burst into tears when she heard a motherly appearing policewoman quote her as saying she still loved Emery and did not care if she went to the electric chair—a penalty Massachusetts never has exacted from a woman.

Three letters she wrote to her married lover were read to the jury, after his widow, Ruth Emery, 25, mother of his two children, testified her husband told her of his relationship with the defendant.

Referring to a conversation at the Psychopathic Hospital, where Mrs. Steadman, 26 and mother of a year-old child, underwent a mental examination, Mrs. Agnes Callahan, the policewoman, said:

"I told her that she was going to be transferred to the Charles Street Jail and that I probably would not see her again.

"'I want to thank you for what you have done for me,' she said. 'I don't care, Mrs. Callahan, whether I get the chair or not,' she said.

"You still love Bobby, don't you, Ruth?" I asked her.

"'Yes, I do. Don't feel sorry for me if I get the chair.'"

In addition to the three air-mailed love letters, two notes identified as written by Mrs. Steadman and found in her apartment after Emery's body was discovered there on January 21, were read to the jury by Assistant District Attorney Edward M. Sullivan, who contends Emery was strangled after becoming stupified with sleeping tablets.

One of the missives, addressed to her father, F. J. Stanwood, read:

"Daddy—I couldn't convince you last night that I really love Bobby, but maybe you'll know now. You were right. There is no hope for anything now, I guess, so while I could, I did this for the easiest way out for me.

"There'd always be so many people between us whom we had to hurt that it never would have worked. Will you please go see if Ruthie is being taken care of and get in touch with Kenneth."

Mrs. Steadman's estranged husband, Kenneth, now lives in Pittsburgh with their year-old daughter.

The other note, addressed to "Mr. Scottie Benvie," of Medfield, Mass., read:

"Scottie—it is hellish to pick on you now but there is no other friend of Bobbie's I could tell. I put sleeping powders in a glass of milk he drank. He suspected something at last though, I am afraid, even after I did grind them up. But I just couldn't stand seeing him pacing up and down worrying.

"We never could be together anyway and this seemed a good way out for me at least at the time. Will you please stay with Ruthie and tell her what I've done. I'm sorry."

Both notes were signed "Ruth."

Appeals Court Rules It, Too, Can Grant Temporary Alimony

The United States Court of Appeals here decided yesterday that, when divorce appeals are pending, its justices have the same authority as the District Court to grant temporary alimony to the wives concerned.

Three justices of the court will hear arguments Monday on whether George A. Brown, 55, a husband who refused to pay, shall have the same sort of hearing he would get in the District Court before the higher tribunal holds him in contempt and possibly orders him jailed.

Brown, a Mount Rainier, Md., electrician, sued Mrs. Mary Estelle Brown July 8, 1938, charging misconduct. She charged cruelty and desertion, in a counter suit. Both sets of charges were declared unfounded by Justice Jennings Bailey on April 11, 1940. Mrs. Brown renewed her charges June 5, 1940, in a suit for separate maintenance. This was thrown out of court a few weeks later by Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, because the charges already had been unfounded.

Mrs. Brown appealed from Justice O'Donoghue's ruling and asked the Court of Appeals for temporary alimony. She was granted $108 a month last September 21, Brown's lawyer, Louis Lebowitz protested that only the District Court could grant alimony and that the higher court has no power to do anything but hear appeals.

Brown failed to pay and last December 2 was ordered to show cause why he should not be held in contempt of court. He renewed his challenge of the court's authority and prepared for the hearing by asking that three justices and the clerk of the District Court be called as witnesses.

Justice Harold Stephens said in a brief opinion yesterday that the court had power to grant temporary alimony as an "incident to the appellate jurisdiction vested" in it.

Concurring in the opinion were Justices Fred Vinson and Justin Miller. All three on Monday will hear arguments on whether the court must give Brown, who is now $884 in arrears, a hearing on the contempt charge.
